Cultural heritage encompasses sites (such as Hadrian’s Wall above) and collections, as well as the intangible heritage of stories and oral histories. This course explores a variety of issues related the stewardship of cultural heritage on a local and global scale. Through readings, case studies, discussion, and hands-on projects, students will explore ethical, economic, legal, political, and pragmatic issues related to tangible and intangible heritage. They will increase their understanding of the practices and processes of cultural heritage management, and will build skills and knowledge relevant for careers in cultural resources management, archaeology, museums, and historic preservation.