be your pillar; be his bondmaid, and he will be your slave; do not make excessive demands, for he will then desert you; do not become too distant from him, for he will then forget you; should he draw near, then draw close to him; should he become distant, stay away from him. Shield his nose, his hearing and his eye so he will smell nothing from you but that which is sweet, hear nothing but that which is good, and look at nothing but that which is beautiful.

This advice does not reflect a role of docility, but one of fortitude and strength in which the mates share responsibilities and obligations, giving and taking in a manner insuring a stable relationship. The woman is placed at the center of the wheel from which the activities and strengths of the household radiate, appealing to and satisfying the husband’s senses. The priorities of responsibilities for a woman include being with her husband, her children; attending to her household; and performing her prayers and fasting. These exemplify complete fulfillment in her realm. Al-Ghazālī emphasizes that since women are “wards” of the guardian or “prisoners” in the hands of men, men should have forbearance for them and protect them. In essence, the Islamic code of behavior, for men and women, stems from the religious matrix as stipulated in the Koran that their actions should be steadfast and upright at all times and be pleasing unto God, thus earning merits with their Lord for the Hereafter (33:35–36).

Finally, in elucidating the myriad conventions accepted by society regarding marriage along with its many ramifications, a heavy intellectual burden is placed on the reader. Hopefully, some light may have been shed in this chapter on al-Ghazālī’s synthesis of existing views on marriage within Islam. The Book on the Etiquette of Marriage is germane to the delineation of the hitherto undefined Islamic code on sex and marriage. It is fitting to end this preliminary discussion with a prayer that al-Ghazālī attributed to the Prophet and which best epitomizes al-Ghazālī’s sincerity and religious piety, as well as his intellectual endeavors:

O God, I take refuge with Thee
from knowledge which does not benefit, from the heart which does not humble itself,
from the act which is not lifted up to God,
and from the prayer which is not heard.
al-Ghazālī’s Introduction

IN THE NAME OF GOD, THE MERCIFUL AND COMPASSIONATE
Praise be to God the marvels of Whose creation are not subject to the arrows of accident, for minds do not reflect on the beginnings of such wonders except in awe and bewilderment, and the favor of Whose graces continue to be bestowed upon all creatures, for they [graces] come in succession upon them [creatures] whether or not they [creatures] wish to receive them [graces]. One of His marvelous favors is creating human beings out of water [Kor. 21:30], causing them to be related by lineage and marriage, and subjecting creatures to desire through which He drove them to tillage (ṭarīqah) and thereby forcibly preserved their descendants. Then He glorified the matter of lineage, ascribed to it great importance, forbade on its account illegitimacy and strongly denounced it through restrictions and reprimands, making the commission thereof an outlandish crime and a serious matter, and encouraging marriage through desire and command.

Glory be to Him who decreed death to His creatures and humbled them thereby through destruction and annihilation, then placed seeds in the soil of the wombs and raised therefrom creatures, forcibly to defeat death, calling attention to the fact that the seas of Providence flood the worlds with benefit as well as harm, prosperity as well as evil, difficulty as well as facility, and concealment as well as revelation. Prayer and peace be upon Muhammad who was sent with warning and good tidings, and upon his household and his companions—prayer that knows neither bounds nor confinement, and may He grant him much peace.

Accordingly, marriage is an aid in [the fulfillment of] religion, an insult to devils, a strong fortress against the enemy of God, and a cause of increase through which the master of prophets outshines the rest of the prophets. How worthy it is, therefore, that its causes be examined and its sunna and etiquette be learned, its aims and ends be explained, and its chapters and sections be clearly specified.

The major guidelines in the Book on the Etiquette of Marriage may be revealed in three chapters: The first chapter deals with the advantages and disadvantages of marriage; the second chapter deals with the etiquette to be observed in the marriage contract and between the two contracting parties; and the third chapter deals with the etiquette of cohabitation after marriage and until dissolution.

CHAPTER ONE

Advantages and Disadvantages of Marriage

GENERAL BACKGROUND

Be it known that the ulema have disagreed over the virtue of marriage: Some stressed it to the point of claiming that it is preferable to seclusion for the worship of God. Others have admitted its virtue but subordinated it to seclusion for the worship of God, regardless of how much the soul yearns for marriage to a degree that disturbs one’s state [of mind] and causes him to succumb to temptation. Others have said: It is preferable to abstain from marriage in this our age; but formerly it was a preferable virtue whereby the means of earning a livelihood was not illicit and the character of women was not censurable. The truth about it cannot be revealed except by first presenting what has been transmitted in the akhbār and the dhār regarding encouragement and discouragement of marriage, and by explaining its benefits and shortcomings, thereby elucidating the virtues or disadvantages of marriage as pertains to everyone who has or has not been spared its calamities.

[Koranic Verses on Marriage]

Among the Koranic verses: God has said, “And marry such of you” [24:32]; this is a command. He also said, “Place not difficulties in the way of their marrying their husbands” [2:232]. This prevented abstinence and enjoined against it. God has said in describing and praising messengers: “And, indeed, We sent Messengers before thee, and We gave them wives and children”
[13:38 (‘Ali)]. Thus he said this in the context of praise and in pointing out excellence. He also praised his saints for requesting it in supplication saying: “And those who say, ‘Our Lord, grant us of our wives and children the delight of our eyes, and make us a model for the righteous.’” It is said of the prophets that God has not mentioned in His book any but those who have families. Thus it was said that [St. John] married but did not cohabit. It is said that he did that to gain virtue and honor, thereby upholding the sunna. Others said that it was to avert the eye. As for Jesus,* he will marry should he come down to earth and will have children.

[Traditions of the Prophet]

As for the abkhâr, we have his [the Prophet’s] sayings: “Marriage is of my sunna; whoever refrains from my sunna refrains from me”; and he* also said: “Marriage is of my sunna; whoever likes my fitrah (natural disposition), let him follow my sunna.”*8

He* also said: “Marry and multiply for I will boast about you over other nations on the day of resurrection, even about the least among you.”*9

And he* also said, “Whoever refrains from my sunna, he is not of me, and marriage is part of my sunna; whoever loves me, let him follow my sunna.”*10

And he* also said, “Whoever refrains from getting married for fear of having a family, is not of us.”*11 This is perhaps a reprimand [directed] against abstinence and not a reason for abstinence.

He* also said, “Whoever has the means, let him get married.”*12 for it will avert the eyes*13 and assure more relief and virtuousness; and who does not. “let him fast for lasting to him is [a form of] castration (uṣūd).”*14 This indicates that the reason for the encouragement of marriage is that the eye might become corrupted,*15 as well as relief. Hija’a is a form of castration of the male [organs] so that his manhood is removed; it [the term] is used metaphorically for sexual impotence during the fast.

And he* also said, “If someone whose religion and trustworthiness you approve should come to you, then get him married; if you do not, you will cause discord on earth and great corruption.”*17 This also explains encouragement [to marry] out of fear of corruption.

He* also said, “Whoever marries or gives in marriage, for the sake of God, deserves the friendship (uwâya) of God.”18 And he also said, “Whoever marries safeguards half of his faith; let him fear God for the second half.”*19 This is also an indication that its virtue is in safeguarding against disobedience, and fortifying against corruption. For the corrupting factor in a man’s religion lies for the most part both in his sexual organs (fajr) and stomach;*20 he can satisfy one of them by marriage.

He* also said, “All acts by the son of Adam shall cease except the third: a righteous son making invocation for him,” etc.*21 He cannot attain this except through marriage.

As for the dihâr, Umar* has said, “Nothing should prevent marriage except incapacity or adultery (fu‘a‘r).”*22 He thus asserted that religion does not prohibit marriage, and he limited its prevention to two disparate factors.

[Traditions of the Companions]

Ibn ‘Abbâs*26 said, “The asceticism of an ascetic is not complete until he marries.” It is possible that he considered marriage an act of devotion which renders asceticism perfect; but it seems that he meant to say thereby that the heart would not be safe from being overcome by desire except through marriage, and that asceticism is not perfect without emptying (fârâgh) the heart [of all preoccupations]. For that reason he would gather his young bondsmen (gîlânî), *27 Akramah and Kurayb,*28 and others reaching adulthood, and would say, “If you wish to get married, I will get you married; when a slave commits adultery, he removes faith from his heart.”

Ibn Mas‘ûd*17 used to say, “Were there but ten days left of my life, I would be inclined to get married so as not to meet God a celibate.”

Two of Murâdh Ibn Jabal’s*17 wives died from the plague, and he, too, was afflicted with the plague; so he said, “Get me married, for I would not like to meet God a celibate.” And this coming from both of them indicates that they considered marriage a virtue rather than a defense against the excessiveness of desire.

"Umar* used to marry frequently and would say, "I only marry for the sake of having offspring."

One\[ of the companions attached himself to the Messenger* of God serving him and staying with him in case he needed to have something done; so the Prophet* said to him, "Won't you get married?" He answered, "O Messenger of God, I am a poor man possessing nothing and would be compelled to abandon your service." The Prophet said nothing, then repeated [the question], and he [the companion] repeated the answer. Then the companion reflected and said, "By God, the Messenger* of God knows better than I what is best for me in my earthly life and in my hereafter and what draws me near to God, and if he should tell me a third time, I will do it." and he [the Prophet] told him a third time: "Won't you get married?" The companion said: "O Messenger of God, get me married." He [the Prophet] said, "Go to such a family\[ and say that the Messenger* of God commands you to give your daughter in marriage to me." He [the companion] said, "O Messenger* of God I have nothing." So he [the Prophet] said to his companions, "Gather for your brother the weight of a date-pit in gold," and they did. Thus they took him to those people and got him married; so he said to [them], "Make a feast"; and they obtained for him from the companions a ewe for the feast.\[ This repetition indicates a virtue in marriage itself. It is possible that he [the Prophet] recognized in him [the companion] a need for marriage.

[Later Transmittals]

It has been related that a certain devotee in olden times excelled his contemporaries in devotion. The goodness of his devotion was brought up to the Prophet of his time. His reply was, "It is so," although he had forsaken somewhat the tradition [of worship]. It grieved the worshipper to hear that, so he asked the Prophet about it, and the Prophet said, "Have you forsaken marriage?" And he said, "I don't consider it forbidden, but I am poor and a burden to people." The Prophet said, "I will give you my daughter in marriage," and he gave him his daughter in marriage.

Bishr b. al-Hārith\[ said, "Ahmad b. Hanbal\[ was preferred over me on three accounts: for seeking what is lawful for himself and others, while I seek it for myself only; for his ability to get married in contrast to my inability; and for being appointed an imam for the common people."

It is said that Ahmad* married the second day following the death of the mother of his son, "Abdullah, and said, "I detest spending the night as a celibate." As for Bishr, when it was said to him, "People have been talking about you because you have refrained from marriage, saying, 'He has forsaken the sunna,' " he replied, "Tell them that religious duties preoccupy him, leaving no time for the sunna." He was blamed on another occasion, so he replied, "Nothing keeps me from marrying except the words of the Almighty [Kor. 2:228 ('Ali)]: And they [the women] have rights similar to those (of men) over them in equity." That was mentioned to Ahmad, who declared, "And where is the like of Bishr?" His position is likened unto the point of a spearhead (badd al-sinān).\[ In spite of that, it has been related that he was seen in a dream and was asked, "What has God done to you?" He replied, "My stages (mandzil) in Paradise have been elevated and I was placed close to the stations (maqāmat)\[ of the prophets in rank, but I have not attained the stages of those with families." And in one account he told me, "I would not have wanted you to encounter\[ me as a celibate"; so we asked him, "What did Abu Naṣr al-Tammār do?" He said, "He was placed seventy steps (darajah) above me." We asked, "For what reason? We used to see you above him." He replied, "Because of his patience with his daughters and dependents." Sufyān b. ‘Ayyinah said, "Having numerous wives is not [indicative of love] of the world because ‘Ali\[ was the most ascetic of the companions of the Prophet* and yet he had four wives and seventeen concubines." Thus marriage is an ancient sunna and one of the traits of the prophets.

A man said to Ibrāhīm b. Adham,\[ "Blessed art thou, for thou hast dedicated thyself to worship through celibacy."\[ He replied, "Indeed your concern for dependents is preferable to all that which I now enjoy." He [the man] replied, "And what prevents you from marriage?" He said, "I have no need for a woman. I do not wish to misrepresent myself to a woman."

It has been said, "A married man is preferred over the celibate in the same way that the mujahad is preferred over the non-mujahad; and one bow (rak'ah) [in worship] of the married man is preferable to seventy bows of one who is celibate."

[Sufi Views on Marriage]

As for what has been related concerning the disadvantages of marriage, the Prophet* said, "The best of all people outside the two hundred* is a man light of back who has neither wife nor child." The Prophet* also said, "There will come a time upon people when a man's destruction shall be at the hands of his wife, his parents, and his children; they shall taunt him for poverty and demand of him beyond his means. He will enter paths wherein he will lose his religion and penitence.

And there is a khobar, according to which, 'One of the two sources of comfortable living is having fewer children, while one of the two sources of poverty is having many of them.'

Abū Sulaymān al-Dārānī* was asked about marriage, and he said, "To abstain is better than to endure them [women], and to endure them is better than to suffer hellfire." He also said, "The single man will find in the pleasures of work and in the emptiness (farigh) of the heart that which the family man cannot find." He once said, "I have not seen any of our companions who married and was able to retain firmly his first rank [marta-bak]." He also said, "He who seeks the following three is inclined toward the world: he who seeks a living, who or marries a woman, or who transcribes a hadith."

Hasan* [al-Hasr] has said, "When God wishes the servant well, he does not preoccupy him with a family or with possessions." Ibn Abū l-Hajwārī* once said, "A group exchanged views over this hadith and came to the conclusion that it did not mean that a man [in this case] could not have both, but that he could have both and they would not preoccupy him." This is a reference to the saying of Abū Sulaymān al-Dārānī, "Whatever divert you from God—which wife, possession, or children—is a curse upon you."

In general, none has been quoted as discouraging marriage unconditionally. As for encouragement to marriage, it has been related both unconditionally and conditionally. Let us, therefore, remove the veil from this subject by delineating the advantages and disadvantages thereof.

[ADVANTAGES OF MARRIAGE]

There are five advantages to marriage: procreation, satisfying sexual desire, ordering the household, providing companionship, and disciplining the self in striving to sustain them.

[Procreation]

The first advantage—that is, procreation—is the prime cause, and on its account marriage was instituted. The aim is to sustain lineage so that the world would not want for humankind. As for sexual desire, it was created as an ingrained urge: like an overseer unto the male. In the male it is, as it were, an overseer to produce the sperm; in the female it serves to facilitate cultivations so as to produce children out of coitus.* It is like luring the bird by spreading about the seed which it likes in order to lead it to the net.

The eternal powers of the Almighty were not incapable of creating beings from the beginning without tilling (husnākh) or coupling. But wisdom decreed the ordering of causes and effects together with the lack of need to demonstrate the power of God to complete the wonders of creation and to fulfill what the Divine Will decreed beforehand; thereby the Word was fulfilled as decreed by the pen [Kor. 96:4].

To bring forth a child is a four-faceted intimacy which is the original reason for encouraging it even after being safeguarded against excessive desire, so that no one wants to meet God as a celibate. The first: to conform to the love of God by seeking to produce the child in order to perpetuate mankind. The second: to earn the love of the Prophet* of God by increasing those in whom he can be glorified. The third: to seek the blessing of the righteous child's invocation after him. The fourth: to seek intercession through the death of the young child should he precede his [father’s] death.

As for the first facet: It is the most delicate of all the facets, the most removed from the understanding of the common folk, and the most meritorious as well as the strongest in the eyes of those with keen insight into the wonders of the Almighty’s creation and into the course of His wisdom. It may be illustrated thus: if the master should give seed and cultivating tools to his slave, and prepare for him the soil to cultivate; if the servant is able to cultivate; if he [the master] should appoint someone to supervise him [the servant]; and if he [the servant], nevertheless, is lazy or does not use the ploughing instruments and neglects the seed until it rots, and he rides himself of the supervisor through some trickery, then he [the servant] would deserve contempt and reprimand from his lord.

God Almighty has created the pair; He has created the male organ and the two ovaries, as well as the sperm in the sheath; He has prepared for it [the sperm] in the ovaries, arteries and ducts, and created the womb as a depository for the sperm; He has endowed both the male and the female with desire. These deeds and instruments bear eloquent testimony to the design of their creator and declare their purpose unto those imbued with wisdom. This would be the case [even] if the Creator had not revealed the design through His Prophet * in the statement “Married multiply”*; how much more if He had openly declared the matter and revealed the secret! Everyone who refrains from marriage neglects tilling, wastes away the seed, does not use the prepared instruments which God has created, and is a violator of the aim of nature as well as the wisdom implied in the evidences of creation foreordained upon these organs by divine writ, unexpressed in letters or voices—writ which can be read by every [person] who has divine insight to understand the intricacies of everlasting wisdom. For that reason, divine legislation exceedingly made the killing of children and the burying of [girls] alive an abomination, for they [such acts] were forbidden for the fulfillment of existence. To this alluded the one who said, “coitus interruptus (fazl) is one of the two burials.”

The one who marries is seeking to complete what God has desired, and the one who abstains, wastes away what God desires to have wasted. Because of God’s desire that mankind should survive, He made feeding the hungry a decree, encouraged it, and referred to it by the term “loan” when He said, “Who is it that will lend unto Allah a goodly loan?” [Kor. 2:245].

Should you say: your statement, that sustenance of the species and of self is desirable, on the assumption that their passing away is detestable to God, which is the difference between life and death, not to mention the will of God Almighty, it being known that all is by the will of God and that God is not in need of creation, then what can the distinction be with Him between their life, or survival (khalī’ah), and their extinction (fadd, ‘sham)? Know then that this word is a truth from which an untruth was sought, for what we have mentioned does not invalidate the relation of all things—good and bad, beneficial and detrimental—to the will of God. Love and abomination (karāhiyyah) contradict each other but they do not oppose the will [of God]; for many a desired aim is hated and many a detested aim is loved; acts of defiance are detestable and they, in spite of being hated, are desired; acts of obedience are desired and they, along with being desired, are loved and pleasing. As for apostasy and evil, we cannot say that they are pleasing and loved but, nevertheless, they are desired. For the Lord has said, “And He is not pleased with ingratitude in His servants.”

How then could the extinction of man, or the hatred thereof, with respect to the love for God, be the same as his subsistence? For the Almighty has said, “I have never hesitated over anything as I hesitate in taking the soul of my Muslim servant. He detests death and I detest harming him, but there is no escape for him from death.”* His saying, “There is no escape from death for him” is a reference to predetermination and to the decree stated in His words, “We have ordained death for all of you” [Kor. 56:60]; and in His saying, “Who hath created life and death.”* There is no contradiction between the Almighty’s words, “We have ordained death for all of you,” and His saying “and I detest harming him.”

However, elucidating the truth therein requires defining the meaning of will, love, and hatred; it also requires revealing their essences, because preliminary to understanding them are matters which suit the desire of created beings, their love and their hatred. How preposterous! For between the traits of Almighty God and those of created beings, there is as much distance as between His beloved essence and theirs. The essence of creations is substance and form, while that of God is hallowed beyond theirs; and just as that which is not essence and form cannot be the same as that which is essence and form, likewise His traits are not the same as the traits of creation. These facts lie within the realm of that which could be disclosed. Beyond them lies the mystery of divine decree, the disclosure of which has been prohibited. So let us stop short of mentioning it and let us confine ourselves to that about which we have been told concerning the difference between undertaking and refraining from marriage. For one of the two would cause the loss of lineage, perpetuating its existence from Adam*, generation upon generation, thus ending with him [Adam]. Therefore, he who refrains from marriage cuts off continuous being from himself [back] to Adam* and dies childless with no descendants.

If, however, the inducement to marriage is simply warding off desire, Mu'ādh would not have said when he contracted the plague, "Get me married, I will not meet my Lord celibate." Should you say, "But Mu'ādh could not expect to have children at that time, so why was he interested in it [marriage]?" I would reply, "Children result from coitus,48 which is a consequence of desire." That is a matter which does not fall in the realm of choice; what is dependent upon the servant's choice is providing the motivation for desire. That is expected in any event. Thus, whoever contracts [marriage], fulfills his obligation and what is incumbent upon him. The rest is beyond his choice. For that reason marriage is desirable also for the impotent; for the urges of desire are veiled and cannot be seen. Even the eunuch who cannot be expected to have an offspring still desires it, in the same manner that a bald man desires to have the blade pass over his head in emulation of others and in keeping with the precedent of the righteous progenitors, and in the same manner that trotting (al-rumal) [while performing the circuit around the Ka'ba] and cloaking (al-ṣafi'ab) oneself over the left shoulder during the pilgrimage today are desirable.49 The purpose at first was to indicate [physical] endurance to the infidels. The emula-

---

ADVANTAGES AND DISADVANTAGES OF MARRIAGE 57

This desire is weak when compared to the desire of one who is capable of tilling. Perhaps it is even weaker when compared with the undesirability of impairing the woman [that is, not using her] with regard to the gratification of desire, for this is not free of danger. Such an interpretation explains the great disapproval [by the righteous] of eschewing marriage in spite of languid sexual desire.

The second facet: striving to attain the love of the Messenger* of God and to please him by increasing that which he can boast of, inasmuch as Messenger of God has openly declared it. Concern for procreation is indicated by what has been related concerning 'Umar*; that he used to marry often and used to say, "I marry for [the sake of producing] children." It was related in the akhkhār that the Prophet* said regarding the depreciation of the barren woman, "A straw mat in the corner of the house is preferable to a barren woman."48 He also said, "The best of your women are the affectionate childbearers." He also said, "A black childbearer is better than a beauty that cannot give birth." This indicates that seeking children has been considered a greater virtue in marriage than satisfying the demands of sexual desire, seeing that a beautiful woman is more suitable for fortification [against desire], in averting the eye, and curtailling desire.

The third facet: that he should be survived by a righteous child who would invoke blessings upon him, as related in one khabar that all the works of the son of Adam will cease except for three, and he mentioned [among them] a righteous child, and in another that "invocations are offered to the dead on platters of light." The saying that "the son might not be virtuous," would not make any difference for he is a believer. Virtue predominates in the offspring of religious parents, particularly if it is resolved to bring him up in and direct him along the path of virtue. By and large, the invocation of the believer for his parents is beneficial be he pious or wicked. He [the believer] is rewarded for his invitations and good deeds, for he has earned them, and he is not rebuked for his ill deeds; for the sin of a sinner is not superimposed upon another. For that reason the Almighty declared, "We cause their progenies to join them, and We deprive them of naught of their [life's] work" [Kor. 52:21]; that is, we do not take away from their deeds and we make their children an addition to their good deeds. The fourth facet: that the child should die before him [the parent] and thus he has an intercessor. It has been related concerning the Prophet* of God that he said, "The child drags his parents into heaven."* In some akhbar, it is related that "the child takes him [the parent] by the garment the same [way] as I now take you by the garment."* He also said, "he progeny is told to enter paradise, but he stands at the gate of paradise in rage and anger saying, 'I will not enter paradise except in the company of my parents.' Then it is said, 'Let his parents enter paradise with him."*1

In another tradition, it is stated that "the children gather at the place of resurrection when created beings are brought to judgment, and it will be said to the angels, 'Take these [the children] to paradise,' but they will stand at the gate of paradise and it will be said to them, 'Welcome to the progeny of the Muslims. Enter! There is no reckoning for you.' They will say, 'Where are our fathers and mothers?' The keepers will reply, 'Your fathers and mothers are not like you, for they have committed sins and ill deeds and they are now rendering account and are making amends for them.' He [the Prophet] said, 'They shout and scream in unison at the gates of paradise.' The Lord Almighty who knows more about them says, 'What is this noise?' They [the keepers] will reply, 'Lord, the children of the Muslims say 'We shall not enter paradise except in the company of our parents.' Almighty God will say, 'Go through the crowds, take the parents by their hands, and lead them into paradise.'"2 The Prophet said, "Whoever has lost two of his children will be shielded from the fire."*3 He also said, "Whoever has lost three that did not attain puberty, God will make him enter paradise by virtue of His mercy for the children's sake." The Prophet was asked, "O Messenger of God, what about two?" And he replied, "Even two."

It is related that marriage was propounded to one of the righteous men, but he hesitated for a while. The Prophet said, "One day he [the righteous man] awoke from his sleep and said, 'Get me married, get me married!' So they got him married. He was asked concerning that matter, to which he replied: 'God may grant me a child, and then receive him unto Himself; thus he would serve as a prelude for my afterlife.' Then he said, 'I saw in a dream that resurrection had come to pass and myself among the created beings there. I was suffering from mortal thirst; the other created beings were also suffering from intense thirst and distress. While we were in that state, behold a group of children* filtered through the crowds covered with veils of light, carrying silver pitchers and golden goblets in their hands and offering drink to one [person] then to another; they filtered through the crowd yet bypassed most of the people. I stretched out my hand to one of them and said, "Give me water to drink, for I am extremely thirsty." But he [the child] replied, "You do not have a child amongst us; we only offer our fathers water to drink." So I said, 'And who are you?' They replied, "We are the deceased infant children of the Muslims." One of the meanings incorporated in his statement, which is mentioned in the Almighty's saying, "so go to your tillth as ye will, and prepare beforehand for your souls" [Kor. 2:223], is children for the hereafter. Thus it has become clear from these four facets that [Satisfying Sexual Desire]

The second advantage: fortification against the devil, curbing lust, warding off the excesses of desire, averting the eye, and safeguarding relief. To this the Prophet* referred when he declared, "He who marries fortifies half of his religion, so let him fear God for the second half." To this he also referred when he stated, "You are enjoined to establish homes. He who cannot do it should fast, for fasting is a [form] of castration." Most of what we have quoted from the aithār and the akhbar points to this interpretation; and this purpose is inferior to the former one because desire is a charge to produce children. Marriage is sufficient for bringing this about, a reason for causing it to be, and a safeguard against the evil of it becoming dominant. One who obeys his master in order to please him is not like one who obeys in order to be freed from a heavy obligation. Sexual desire and children are foreordained and between them exists a tie. It is not appropriate to say that the aim is pleasure and the child is a necessary result, just as elimination is a necessary result of eating, not an aim in itself. Rather, the child is the aim by instinct and decree, and sexual desire is merely an inducement thereto. I cannot conceive of any purpose for sexual desire except procreation. The pleasure which accompanies it—pleasure which would be unrivaled were it to last—is a harbinger of the promised pleasures in paradise. For to encourage pleasure which one cannot enjoy is pointless. Thus were an impotent male encouraged to seek enjoyment of coitus, or were a young boy encouraged to seek rule and power, encouragement would be to no avail. One virtue of the world’s pleasures is that people wish to see them [pleasures] continue in paradise; thus they are an inducement to the worship of God.

Behold the wisdom, the mercy, and the divine fulfillment (al-ta’bıyah al-Ilahiyyah): how two lives, one external (zākihah) and one internal (kātīnah), were fused together by one desire. The exoteric life is the perpetuation of the individual through the preservation of his lineage, which is a form of the perpetuation of existence. The esoteric life is the life in the hereafter, “so if this pleasure, diminished by the speedy passage of time, activates the desire for [attaining] pleasure by becoming everlasting, then it encourages the kind of worship which leads to it [pleasure].” Consequently the servant [of God] benefits by becoming so desirous of it and gains the ability to persist in that which leads him to the blissfulness of paradise.

There is not an atom in the body of man, internal or external in the Kingdom of Heaven and Earth, within which one would not discover a measure of wisdom and wonder that baffles the mind. Nevertheless, it can be revealed only to a pure heart in proportion to its purity and to the extent that it resists the world’s pleasures, its enticements, and its snares. Thus, marriage for the sake of curbing excessive desire is important in religion to all who do not suffer from impotence—these happen to constitute the majority of created beings. For if sexual desire prevails and encounters no resistance from the force of piety, it will lead to the commission of an abomination (jihālah).

To this the Prophet* referred when conveying the word of the Almighty, “If ye do not so, there will be confusion in the land, and great corruption.” If it [sexual desire] is bridled with the bridle of piety, and the purpose [of marriage] is to curtail the limbs [of the body] (jawa‘īr) from responding to desire, then marriage would avert the eye and preserve relief by guarding the heart as well as the mind against temptation. For that is not a matter of one’s choice, rather the self will continue to entice him and tempt him to have coitus, and the tempting devil will not abandon him most of the time. That could occur during prayer; thus he may envision such details of coitus which, were he to confess them to the lowliest of creatures, they would blush. Yet God knows [the secrets of] his heart because the heart is to God as the tongue is to man. For the chief preoccupation of the novice (murid)* who wants to pursue the path of the hereafter is his heart. [Moreover], persistence in fasting does not eliminate the element of temptation as pertains to most people, unless it is coupled with weakness of the body and disturbance of the temperament. For that reason Ibn ‘Abbās* declared, “The asceticism of the ascetics cannot be complete without marriage.” This is a universal ordinance from which few can be delivered.

Qatādah* said, in interpreting the words of the Almighty, “Impose not on us that which we have not the strength to bear”, that is, lust. It is said that ‘Akramah* and Mujāhid* interpreted the Almighty’s words “for man was created weak” [Kor. 4:28] by saying, “He cannot refrain from women.” Fayyād b. Najih said that “When the male experiences an erection, he loses two-thirds of his mind”; others say “He loses a third of his religion.” One of the rare interpretations rendered by Ibn ‘Abbās* of the verse “From the evil of the darkness when it is intense” [Kor. 113:3]* is to the male erection, which is an overpowering catastrophe should it rage, as no mind or religion can
ON ETIQUETTE OF MARRIAGE

It can become an impetus for the two lives together, it is the devil's strongest instrument. To this he referred in these words: "The bride is always sexual desire." And that is his desire. The Prophet said in his invocation, "I have been cleansed from the evils of my hearing, my heart and the evils of my semen." He also said, "I have not seen a heart that has not its own intelligence." So how do the others wherefrom the Messenger* of God used to marry frequently; he never had less sons. Some Sufis criticized him, to which he retorted, "If you presented yourself before God or the Messenger* and experienced sexual desire?" It is a thing that occurs frequently." He retorted, "You may spend a certain amount of time with your wife, but never marry without a wife; but never did a day of your life pass without sexual desire?" He [one of the people] replied, "It is not. To this he retorted, "And you, also, they do, would eat as they do." He [one of the people] said, "If I marry a wife, she will eat as I do."

The Messenger* of God commanded that a man should marry a woman and is attracted to her should have sexual desire. For that sexual desire is a legitimate desire. The Prophet* related that the Prophet* of God saw a man who was unfaithful to his wife, Zaynab, pulled her into the fire. The Prophet* declared: "When a woman炎热 in the image of the devil, so should a man see a woman who appeals to him, let him approach her wife because she has what that woman has." The Prophet* said, "Do not have intercourse with a woman whose husband is absent because the devil flows through your veins as does the blood." So we said, "And your veins?" He replied, "And mine; but God has fortified me against it and therefore I am safe." Sulaym b. 'Ayyubiah said, "'Safe' means delivered from it [temptation]. That is its meaning because the devil does not deliver."

It was also related that the son of 'Umar*, one of the ascetics among the companions, also of the ulema among them, used to break the fast by coitus before eating. It is probable that he had intercourse before the evening prayer, after which he would perform abstinence and pray, all for the purpose of emptying the heart to enable it to concentrate on the worship of God and to remove from it the implements of the devil. It has been related that he [son of 'Umar] had coitus with three of his concubines during the month of Ramadan before the last evening prayer.

Ibn 'Abbás has declared, "The best of this nation is mostly men;" and since sexual desire was a predominant force in the temperaments of the Arabs, the frequency of marriage among their righteous men was more common.

It was for the purpose of freeing the heart that marriage with the bondmaid was permitted when there was fear of hardship, even though it results in enslaving the son, which is a kind of atonement; such marriage is forbidden to anyone who can obtain a free woman. However, the enslaving of a son is preferable to destroying the faith, for enslavement affects temporarily the life of the child, while committing an abomination results in losing the hereafter; in comparison to one of its days the longest life is insignificant.

It has been related that one day some people departed from a gathering with Ibn 'Abbás, except for one young man who did not leave. Ibn 'Abbás asked him, "Do you have something to ask?" He said, "Yes, I wish to ask you a question, but I was ashamed to ask it in front of the people. Now I stand in awe out of respect for you."

"An alim* takes the place of the father."
said Ibn ‘Abbâs, “so what you would have divulged to your father, disclose to me.” He said, “I am a young man with no wife. On occasion I have feared distress for myself, and thus sought relief in masturbation. Is there an act of transgression in it?” So Ibn ‘Abbâs turned away from him, then said, “How disgusting! Marrying a bondmaid is better than that, yet it is better than committing fornication.”

This is an indication that a youthful bachelor is torn among three evils: The least of these is marrying a bondmaid, which would lead to enslavement of the offspring; worse than that is masturbation; and the most abominable of the three is fornication. Ibn ‘Abbâs did not permit the commissioner of either because both [the first two] are forewarned against and should be resorted to only to prevent committing a greater evil, in the same manner as one would eat carrion to avoid self-destruction. Preponderance over the lesser of two evils cannot be construed as unrestrained permissiveness or as absolute virtue; cutting off a malignant arm is not a good act even though it is permissible when death is impending. Therefore marriage is meritorious in this respect, but this does not apply to all [people], only to most. Many a person’s desire cools off on account of old age, illness, or the like, and therefore this factor would not apply to him; and what has already been mentioned concerning procreation remains intact. This is general except in the case of the eunuch, which is rare.

It is preferable for a person with temperament: so overcome by desire that one woman cannot curb it to have more than one woman, up to four. For God will grant him love and mercy, and will appease his heart by them [women]; if not, replacing them is recommended. Seven nights after the death of Fātimah,* ‘Ali* got married. It is said that al-Hasan, the son of ‘Ali, was a great lover having married more than two hundred women. Perhaps he would marry four at a time, and perhaps he would divorce four at a time replacing them with others. The Prophet* said to al-Hasan, “You resemble me in appearance and in character.”* He* also said, “Hasan takes after me and Husayn takes after ‘Ali.”* It was said that his indulgence in marriage is one of the characteristics in which he resembled the Messenger* of God as well as al-Mughirah Ibn Shu’bah who married eighty women. Among the companions were those who had three and four [wives] while those who had two cannot be counted. No matter how well known the inducement, the cure should be in proportion to the ailment; for the aim is tranquilizing one’s self, and therefore this must be taken into consideration in deciding how many wives one should have.

[Companionship]

The third advantage: comfort and relaxation for the soul through companionship; seeing and dallying comfort the heart and strengthen it for the performance of the obligatory rituals. For the self grows weary and has the tendency to shun work because that is contrary to its nature. If compelled to adhere to what disagrees with its nature, it becomes recalcitrant and defiant. If it finds an outlet for itself periodically, it becomes stronger and more energetic. The companionship of women provides relaxation which relieves distress and soothes the heart. It is incumbent upon the pious to acquire such comfort by permissible means. For that reason Almighty God declared, “that he might take rest in her” [Kor. 7:189] and ‘Ali said, “Relax the heart an hour, if it is compelled it is blinded.” A khabar states, “A wise man should divide his time three ways: one for meditating, one for self-examination, and one for eating and drinking. In this [latter] time, there is help for the other period.” The same is stated in another expression: “The wise man is desirous only of three things: provisioning himself for a return journey (ma’did), seeking a livelihood (maranmah), or [seeking] pleasure in something not forbidden.” The Prophet* states, “For every desire (irdâh) there is a shirrah (eagerness), and for each shirrah there is a fitrah (natural disposition).” He whose fitrah leads to my sunna is guided; “ Shirrah is the striving and the enduring which come about in the beginning when exercising the will, while fitrah means stopping for rest. Abû al-Dardâ’ used to say, “I find relaxation for myself with a little diversion (lahâ), thereby gaining strength to walk in uprightness thereafter.”

In some akhbâr pertaining to the Prophet*, he said, “I complained to Gabriel* of my inability to have coitus, and he suggested [I cat] harisah.* If this be true, it can be interpreted only as a preparation for relaxation and cannot be interpreted to imply warding off desire; for it is rather a kindling of desire, and whoever is deprived of sexual desire is denied most of this intimacy.

The Prophet* also said, “Three things of your world have been made desirable to me: perfume (fiš), women, and my delight (qarut al-ay-nil) in prayer.” This, too, is a benefit that cannot be denied by one who has experienced the weariness of thoughts and remembrances (dhikr) and different types of work, which lie outside the two previously mentioned benefits. Indeed, it extends even to the eunuch and to the one who has no sexual desire. As a matter of fact, this advantage renders marriage meritorious if it is concluded with such an intent, but rare are those who marry for this end.

As for the aim of having an offspring as well as that of warding off desire and the like, they are prevalent. Besides, many a person finds pleasure in looking at flowing water, greenery, and the like and is not in need of relieving himself by conversing and dallying with women. Thus this [aim] varies with circumstances and individuals; so let it be taken into consideration.

[Ordering the Household]

The fourth advantage: being free from the concerns of household duties, as well as of preoccupation with cooking, sweeping, making beds, cleaning utensils, and means for obtaining support. If a human being had no desire (shukwah) for coitus, it would still be difficult for him to live in his house alone; because if he were saddled with all the work of attending the house, he would waste most of his time and have very little of it left for learning and working.

The virtuous woman who takes care of the house abets religiousness in this manner, and any disturbance of these preoccupations would perturb the heart and impede life. For that reason Abó Sulaymān al-Dārānī* declared, “The virtuous wife is not of this world, for she liberates you for the hereafter. Her contribution to freeing [the man] is by both taking care of the house and by satisfying sexual desire.” Muhammad b. Ka'b al-Qarazi said in interpreting God’s words, “O Lord! Give unto us in the world that which is good” [Kor. 2:201]: he meant a virtuous woman. The Prophet said, “Let each among you have a grateful heart; a tongue which invokes [the name of God]; and a faithful, virtuous wife who assists you toward the hereafter.” Behold how he has equated her with invocation and thanksgiving. In a commentary regarding the Almighty’s word, it is stated: “him verily We shall quicken with good life” [Kor. 16:97]: he meant a virtuous wife.

‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭab* used to say, “Next to faith in God, the best gift which has been given to man is a virtuous woman. There are some women that are priceless and others that are yokes from whom one cannot be redeemed”: by priceless is meant that she [woman] cannot be replaced by any other gift.

The Prophet* also said, “I was preferred over Adam by two gifts: His wife abetted him into transgression, while my wives urge me in obedience; his devil was a blasphemer and my devil [is] a Muslim* who only enjoins to good.” Thus he [the Prophet] considered helping him towards obedience as a virtue. This, also, is one of the virtues to which the righteous [men] aim, except that it is pertinent to some individuals who have no legal guardian or manager. It does not call for two wives, [since] plurality may render life miserable and disrupt the affairs of the home.

The aim of such an advantage is the expansion of kinfolk [through the wife] as well as gaining strength by virtue of interfamily relations. This is one of the things that is needed in warding off evil and seeking tranquility. For that reason it was said, “Abased is the one who has no protector; but he who finds someone who repels evil from him, his state is secured and his heart is freed for worship.” For abasement disturbs the heart while strength in numbers wards off abasement.

[Disciplining the Self]

The fifth advantage: disciplining the self* and training it to be mindful, faithful, loyal, and respectful of the rights of the ahl
new, and who does not taste in paradise like this said, "The Lord the last one, who of [wives]. He prophets* that a said, "The Lord of [wives]. He * was hospitable patience. God preoccu-ences that cannot a livelihood. "128 whom he supports in them indepen-prise his reward to be forgiven."129 In this hadith, "By far the most misleading provided well to him that he said, "Solitude is to concentrate better dream, a week sen, and men de-air. Every time one behind him, uld reply, 'Yes!' I the last one, who is the unfortu-

Another hadith

ed, 'You.' And I exalt your deeds God; but a week with those who tell you that you are guilty married, get me or three [wives].

s that a
to them. He [Jonah] would enter and leave his house and be mistreated by his wife, yet remain silent. They were astonished, but he said, "Don't be; for I have beseeched Almighty God saying, 'Hasten upon me in this life whatever punishment thou hast prepared for me in the hereafter'; so He said, 'Your punishment is the daughter of so and so whom you should marry.' So I married her and am enduring from her what you see."

Such endurance is a form of self-discipline, an appeasement of anger, and an improvement of character. A person who secludes himself or who associates himself with someone of a refined character does not reflect on the evils of his inner self, nor are his hidden faults revealed. It is, therefore, the duty of one who walks the path of the hereafter to tempt himself by being exposed to the like of such agitations, and to become accustomed to enduring them so that his character should be set straight, his soul should be calm, and he should be purified of the base qualities hidden within him.

Enduring the burden of dependents, which is a form of exercise and struggle to provide for them and sustain them, is an act of worship in itself. However, only one of two types of men benefits from it: either a man who seeks striving, exercising, and character training because he is at the beginning of the Path and is therefore not unlikely to consider this a manner of striving by which his soul is exercised; or, a worshipper who does not pursue virtue through the path of the esoteric (tayr bil-batin), mental activity, and the experiences of the heart, but whose [virtuous] deeds are physical, such as prayer, performing the pilgrimage, and the like. His working to gain lawfully for his wives and children, maintaining them and bringing them up properly, is better for him than acts of worship which are imposed upon his body and whose benefits do not extend to others.

As for the man whose character is well formed either through inherent traits or through a previous effort, if he wants to succeed in obtaining an inner life and an intellectual and spiritual activity in the domain of religious and mystical sciences, then he should not marry for that reason because he has no need for exercise. As for worship in the form of providing for dependents, seeking knowledge is better than that because it [seeking knowledge], too, is a form of work, but its benefits are more numerous and more encompassing than the benefit of providing for dependents. These then are the advantages of marriage, which in religion are decreed to be virtuous.

[DISADVANTAGES OF MARRIAGE]

[Inability to Seek Lawful Gain]

The disadvantages of marriage are three: one—the strongest—is the inability to seek gain lawfully. For that is not available to every person, especially nowadays, because of social instability and because marriage encourages the amplification of attempts to provide [for dependents] through unlawful means. In it [marriage] is, thus, a man's destruction and the destruction of his family; a bachelor is safeguarded therefrom. As for a married man, he is most often driven into the paths of evil by following the whims of his wife and selling his hereafter for this world.

There is a khabar which states that "the servant (‘abd) is made to stand before the scales with good deeds that resemble mountains in weight." He then is questioned concerning the care and support of his family, the source of his wealth and how he spent it until such reckoning absorbs all his good deeds, thus not one good deed remains to his account; whereupon the angels cry out: 'Behold, here is the man whose dependents consume his good deeds in the world and is today mortgaged by his deeds.'

It is said that those first to cling to man on the day of resurrection will be his wife and children who will cause him to stand in the presence of Almighty God and then say, "O Lord! Give us our just due from him, for he taught us not what we were ignorant of, feeding us by unlawful means and we did not know it." He [God] will punish him for their sake. One of the forefathers said, "When God wills evil to a servant, He sets upon him fangs in this world to devour him"; meaning dependents.

The Prophet said, "No one will meet God with a greater offense than one who ignores [the needs of] his dependents." This is a general calamity from which few are delivered, excepting one with possessions that are inherited or gained lawfully, which he uses to redeem himself and his family, provided he is content not to seek more. Such a person will be delivered from this calamity as will be a craftsman who is able to gain lawfully through permissible means, such as gathering firewood, hunting, or engaging in a craft that is not dependent upon rulers, and thereby is able to deal with virtuous people; also, the one who manifests blamelessness and most of whose possessions are lawfully gained [will be delivered by God].

Ibn Sālim said when asked about marriage: "It [marriage] is more desirable in this time of ours for someone who is overcome by lust: like the male donkey who sees a female donkey and can neither be dissuaded from her by beating nor can he control himself; should he control himself, it is preferable to leave him alone."

[Failure to Uphold Wives' Rights]

The second disadvantage: the failure to uphold their [wives'] rights, to tolerate their manners, or to endure harm from them. This is less prevalent than the previous [disadvantage], inasmuch as it is easier to overcome the latter than the former. Improving one's manners with women and upholding their rights are easier than seeking lawful gain. There is also danger in this because he [the husband] is a shepherd and is responsible for his flock. The Prophet* said, "It is sin (isthm) enough for a man to destroy those for whom he provides."[126

It has been related that one who deserts his family is like a runaway slave in that his prayer and his fasting are not acceptable until he returns to them. Whoever fails to uphold his wives' rights, even though he might be present, is like a fugitive. The Lord has said, "Ward off from yourselves and your families a [hell]Fire" [Kor. 66:6]. He commanded us to safeguard them from the Fire as we would safeguard ourselves.

A person might fail to uphold his own right, and were he to get married this obligation would be compounded, and to his self another person be added. Self is an impetuous evil; if self is increased, the incitement to evil usually increases. For that reason, a certain man declined to get married and said, "I am afflicted with my own self; how can I add another self to it?"[149

As has been said, "The mouse hole would not be large enough to contain it [the mouse] if a broom was tied to its tail."

Ibrahim Ibn Adham[141 also declined [to get married] by saying, "I will not attach a woman unto me, nor do I have need for women; that is to say, I am unable to care for them, protect them, and provide for them since I lack the means."

Likewise Bishr declined saying, "I am prevented from marriage by the Almighty's words, 'And they (women) have rights similar to those (of men).'") He used to say, "Were I to care for a chicken, I would fear becoming a butcher on the bridge."

Sufyan b. "Ayinah" was seen at the gate of the sultan and was told, "This is not your place!" He replied, "Have you seen a woman with a family who is more successful?" Sufyan used to say, "I yearn for celibacy, the key," and a place of dwelling which the wind can penetrate and where no commotion or shouting [exists]."

This [the second disadvantage] is, too, a common evil—though less prevalent than the first—from which only an intelligent, wise man can be delivered: A man possessing good character and insight into the ways of women, is tolerant of their tongues, is not driven by their desires, is careful to fulfill his obligations towards them, can overlook their mistakes, and is cognizant of their manners. Most people are given to impudence, boorishness, irritability, frivolity, bad manners, and injustice while seeking full justice. Inevitably, such men through marriage become more corrupt in this respect. Hence celibacy is safer for them.

[Distractions from God]

The third disadvantage—which is less [of an evil] than the first and the second—[lies in the possibility] that the wife and the offspring could distract him from Almighty God, luring him to pursue the world and indulge in providing a comfortable life for his children through gathering wealth and hoarding it for them, and enticing him to seek exaltation and multiplication through them. Whatever distracts [one's attention] from God—whether wife, wealth, or offspring—brings misfortune upon the possessor. I do not imply by this that it would lead to forbidden deeds, for that [whatever leads to forbidden deeds] has already been listed under the first and second disadvantages, but rather that it would entice him to indulge in the enjoyment of what is permissible, leading into excesses in dailying flitting, and excessive enjoyment of them [women]. From marriage arise various types of such distractions that engross the heart; thus night and day would pass and the person would not have time to think about the hereafter or prepare for it. For that reason Ibrahim Ibn Adham* said, "No good can come out of one who becomes accustomed to the thighs of women." Abu Sulayman* said, "Whoever marries attaches himself to the world." That is to say, he is lured to depend on the world.

[CONCLUSIONS]

This is the sum total of disadvantages and advantages. To judge that a person is absolutely better off [by] being married or single falls short of taking into consideration all these matters. Rather, such advantages and disadvantages can be considered a precept and a criterion against which the novice should measure himself. If the disadvantages [of marriage] are nonexistent in his case and the benefits are all present, that is, if he has lawfully gained possessions, good character, and earnest pursuit of religion, marriage would not distract him from God; if he [the novice] is, nevertheless, a young man in need of appeasing his sexual desire, if he is a bachelor in need of someone to take care of his house, and if he needs fortification through family associations, then marriage is unquestionably better for him even though its [primary] aim is to produce offspring. If the advantages are refuted and the disadvantages are brought together, being celibate is preferable for him; but if the two are equal, which is most likely, it is necessary to weigh on just scales the extent to which the advantages contribute to the promotion of his religion and the extent to which the disadvantages detract from it. If it appears that one group outweighs the other, it should be acted upon. For the most obvious advantages are procreation and appeasing desire, while the most obvious disadvantages are the need for unlawful gain and distraction from

God. Let us assume that these matters are comparable in importance: We would then conclude that if a man is not troubled by sexual desire, if the benefit of his marriage lies in the endeavor to obtain an offspring, and if the evils of his marriage lie in the necessity to gain unlawfully and to be distracted from God—then celibacy is preferable. There is no advantage in whatever distracts one from God or in earning unlawful gain.

The matter of offspring cannot compensate for the absence of these two considerations, [because] marriage for the purpose of obtaining an offspring is illusory and this constitutes a consummate deficiency in religion. To preserve his own life and to guard it from destruction is more important than seeking to produce an offspring; that is a gain, and religion is an investment. For in the corruption of religion lies the loss of the hereafter and the dissipation of the investment. Such a benefit cannot counteract either of those two disadvantages. However, if to the matter of the offspring is added the need to appease desire, which results from one's yearning for marriage, then one might consider marriage. If the reins of righteousness are not strengthened in his mind, and if he fears committing fornication, then marriage is preferable for him because he is hesitant between committing fornication and attaining unlawful gain; earning unlawful gain is the lesser of the two disadvantages. If he trusts himself not to commit fornication, and is unable at the same time to avert the eye from what is unlawful, then abstaining from marriage is preferable. For, to look lustfully is unlawful and to earn gain in an improper way is unlawful. Seeking gain takes place continually and in it lies his [ultimate] ruin and the ruin of his family, while looking takes place occasionally and this pertains to him [and does not involve his relations] and passes away quickly. Looking constitutes adultery by the eyes but, if not rectified by relief, is easier to forgive than eating forbidden fruit, unless it is feared that looking should end in the defiance of relief, thus entailing the threat of affliction.

If this be the case, then we are confronted with the third situation: that is, to have the strength to avert the eyes but not to ward off thoughts distracting the heart; here it is preferable to abstain from marriage because the [evil] deeds of the heart are easier to forgive. Emptying the heart for the sake of worship is desirable; [besides] the act of worship is precluded by unlawful gain, consuming it [gain], and feeding it to others. Thus it is necessary to weigh these disadvantages against the advantages and to judge accordingly. Whoever becomes aware of this will not find it difficult to comprehend what we have transmitted from the righteous forefathers, namely encouragement of marriage in certain situations and in others discouragement therefrom as much as this is dependent upon circumstances.

If you should ask, "Which is better for someone who is safeguarded from the disadvantages of marriage, seclusion for the worship of God or marriage?" I would reply: Combine the two, because marriage is a contract and does not preclude seclusion for the worship of God; rather, it pertains to the need for lawful gain. If he is able to earn lawful gain, then marriage is also better, because it is feasible for him during the night and the rest [that is, the unoccupied portion] of the day to be in seclusion for worship; persistence in worship without relaxation is not feasible. If it be assumed that earning a livelihood preoccupies his whole time to the extent that he has none left other than that prescribed—sleeping, eating, and performing the necessary—and if he is one of those who do not pursue the hereafter except through the supererogatory prayer, pilgrimage, or similar physical activities, then marriage is better for him. For earning lawful gain, supporting a family, seeking to obtain offspring, and tolerating the manners of women constitute forms of worship whose merits do not fall short of supererogatory acts of worship. If he should worship by means of knowledge, meditation, and the path of esotericism, and should lawful gain-complicate that, then abstaining from marriage is preferable.

Should you ask, "Why then did Jesus* abstain from marriage in spite of its virtue? And if it is preferable to free oneself for the worship of God, why then did our Prophet* take on numerous wives?" Know ye, then, that it is preferable to combine the two in the case of one who is able, whose desire is strong, and whose ambition is high, because no preoccupation can distract him from God.

Our Messenger* armed himself with strength and combined the virtue of worship and that of marriage. In spite of his nine women,* he still dedicated himself to God. For him, the satisfaction of the sexual need was not an obstacle. At the same time, those who are preoccupied with worldly needs are not constrained in their affairs by the fulfilling of natural needs; outwardly, they perform that which is necessary, but their hearts are preoccupied with solitude not unmindful of their important duties. The Messenger* of God, because of his elevated status, was not deterred by the dictates of this world from the presence of the heart with God. He used to receive revelation (wahy) while he was in his wife's bed. If this is true in the case of someone else, it is not inconceivable that irrigation canals can be altered by what cannot alter the mighty ocean; in other words, one cannot compare others unto him [that is, the Prophet]. As for Jesus,* he armed himself with resolutions and not strength; he took precautions, for perhaps his state was such that preoccupation with a family could have affected it, or made it difficult to seek lawful gain, or made marriage and seclusion for worship irreconcilable. Thus he preferred to devote himself to worship. For they [prophets] are more aware [than others] of the secrets of their states, of the precepts of their times regarding virtuous gain, of the manners of women, of the calamities of marriage upon the marrier, and of the benefits he [that is, the marrier] has therein. No matter how different the circumstances are, in some cases it is preferable to marry and in others to abstain. We should deem the deeds of the prophets as preferable in all cases—and God knows best.
As Concerns Marriage: Conditions of the Woman and Stipulations of the Marriage Contract

[MARRIAGE CONTRACT]
As for the marriage contract (‘aqid), it has four conditions that facilitate its establishment and dissolution:

1. Permission of the guardian; if not, then [that of] the ruler.¹

2. Consent of the woman if she is a nonvirgin adult (thalib bāagh) or a virgin adult given away in marriage by someone other than her father or grandfather.

3. The presence of two witnesses openly known for fairness. If both enjoy a blameless record, then the establishment of the contract is decreed.

4. A declaration (ijāb) and a related acceptance (qabul) encompassing the term "marry," "give in marriage," or some similar term, pronounced by two individuals charged with the responsibility, neither of whom is a woman; but [they] could include the husband, the guardian [of the woman], or the representative [of either party].

[ETIQUETTE OF MARRIAGE]
Concerning the etiquette of marriage: The engagement should be arranged with a guardian, not during the legally prescribed waiting period (‘iddah) of the woman, but rather after its termination if the woman is observing such a period, and provided that she is not already engaged to another, since an engagement while another is pending is forbidden.² Proper etiquette requires an engagement [period] prior to marriage, and associating the expression of praise [to God] with the declaration and the acceptance; thus the one giving the woman in marriage says, "Praise be to God and blessings upon the Messenger of God. I give you my daughter, so and so, in marriage"; and the husband replies, "Praise be to God and blessings upon the Messenger of God. I accept her in marriage upon this dowry (ṣadq)." Let the dowry be fixed and small. It is also desirable to pronounce the words "Praise be to God" before the engagement. Its etiquette includes that the affairs of the husband be revealed to the wife; if she is a virgin, this is more appropriate and more conducive to congeniality between them. For that reason it is desirable that she should look at her before marriage, as it is more likely to lead to enrichment of their relationship.

Its etiquette also calls for the presence of a group of righteous people in addition to the two witnesses who are required to establish the validity [of the contract]. The etiquette also specifies that the intent of marriage should be upholding the sunna, avert the eye, bearing children, and the rest of the aforementioned advantages; thus the purpose of marriage will not be merely for pleasure and enjoyment, which would render such an act a worldly endeavor. This does not preclude such intentions, for many a virtue coincides with passion. 'Umar b. 'Abd al-‘Aziz declared: "If virtue coincides with passion, it is like 'butter with dates'" (al-zuhada bi-nissiyân). It is not impossible that one should be motivated by his desires and the dictates of religion simultaneously. It is desirable that the marriage be contracted in the mosque and during the month of Shawwal. ‘Alî b. al-‘Aṣbaḥ* said, "The Prophet* married me in Shawwal, and consumated the marriage in Shawwal."

[REQUISITE QUALITIES FOR THE WOMAN]

A woman given in marriage is either one who is taken as a lawful wife, or one who is taken for enjoyment and the attainment of certain purposes.

[Legal Disabilities or Restrictions on Marriage]

The first type: The woman taken as a lawful wife should be free from that which would prohibit her marriage. There are nineteen restrictions.8

1. That she be married to another.
2. That she be in a legally prescribed waiting period [which precedes marriage] to another [person], regardless of whether that period is due to [the husband's] death, to divorce, to suspicion [of adultery], or is being cleared from suspicion aroused by [her] owner [that is, being a concubine-slave of the owner].
3. That she be an apostate for having uttered an expression of unbelief.
4. That she be a Magian.9
5. That she be an idolator or freethinker (zindeq) who follows neither a prophet nor a book. Women in this category include those who follow the doctrine of libertinism—marrying them is not lawful; also [included in this category is] every female subscribing to a false doctrine whose believer is deemed an infidel.
6. [If] she is a follower of a revealed religion (kiddâyah)10 which she adopted after conversion or after the Prophet's mission [as Messenger of God], and who furthermore is not a descendant from the Children of Israel, unless both conditions apply, marrying her is not permissible; but if she lacks genealogy only, then [among the jurisprudents] there is no consensus.
7. That she be a slave and the marrier a free man who is capable of marrying a free woman or who fears committing fornication (‘fanat).11
8. That she be totally or partially a slave of the marrier.
9. That she be related to the [man] either by descent from his progenitors (usâd) or collaterals (fusûl), or of the collaterals of his first progenitors, or from the first collateral of every progenitor after a progenitor. By usâd, I mean mothers and grandmothers; and by his fusûl, [male] children and grandchildren; and by fusûl awwal fusûl, brothers and their children; and by awwal fasîl from every asîl [singular of usîl] after it, the progenitor of maternal and paternal aunts, not their children.
10. That she be unlawful [for marriage] through nursing,12 and among those prohibited by reason of nursing are the relations prohibited in terms of the usâd and fusûl discussed above.
However, those forbidden are the ones who have been nursed five times, not the ones nursed fewer times.

11. That she be forbidden because of marriage ties; that is, (a) if the marrier were already married to her daughter or granddaughter, or (b) if he previously possessed them [as slaves either] by direct contract or semicontract, or (c) if he had had sexual relations with them in a quasi-contract [common marriage], or (d) if he had sexual intercourse with her mother or one of her grandmothers in a marital contract or quasi-contract; for the mere contract of marriage with a woman renders her maternal female ascendants unlawful. Her collateral relatives are forbidden only on account of coitus, or if his [the marrier's] father or son had married her before.

12. That the woman be the fifth, that is, that the marrier already has four [wives] acquired either by marriage or by virtue of [the fact that at least one of his wives is in] the state of the legally prescribed waiting period pending remarriage (‘iddat al-ray’ah) to him. But if her divorce is final and she is in another prescribed waiting period (‘iddat bayinah), then marrying the fifth is not unlawful.

13. That the marrier be married to her sister, her maternal aunt, or her paternal aunt; that is, through marriage he would bring both of them together [as wives]. Marriage is not permissible between a related pair if one is male and the other a female, and thus they cannot be brought together [in marriage].

14. That she be divorced three times by the marrier and thus be unlawful to him unless another husband [muhabil] has sexual intercourse with her in a lawful marriage. The marrier has exchanged curses with her; in this case, after the oath of condemnation (li’din), she is forever unlawful to him.

15. That she be in a state of ritual consecration of the major (hajj) or lesser (‘umra) pilgrimage, or that the husband be in the same state; marriage then cannot take place until the completion of the period of sanctification.

16. That she be a deflowered young woman; marrying her is then not permissible until she has reached puberty.

18. That she be an orphan, in which case marrying her is not permissible until she reaches the age of puberty.

19. That she be one of the widowed wives of the Messenger* of God or one with whom he has mated, for they are regarded as mothers of the believers; that [restriction] is not applicable in our [al-Ghazālī's] time. These are the prohibitive hindrances.

[QUALITIES CONducIVE TO A HAPPY CONJUGAL LIFE]

There are eight qualities which render a conjugal life happy and which must be sought in the woman in order to assure the perpetuity of the marriage: piety, good character, beauty, a small dowry, ability to bear children, virginity, [good] lineage, and she should not be a close relative.

[Piety]

That she should be virtuous and religious is the most fundamental requisite, and to that end [special] care must be taken. For, if her religious principles are too weak to give her the strength to be virtuous and constant, she will humiliate her husband, disgrace him among people, trouble his heart with jealousy, and thereby render his life miserable. Should she succumb to passion and jealousy, he would remain in trial and tribulation. Should he, on the other hand, follow the path of permissiveness, he would be athesptic toward his religion and honor and would be guilty of lacking zeal and pride. Also, if she is beautiful but corrupt, she will be the cause of greater tribulation; for then it becomes difficult for the husband to separate from her: thus he is neither able to renounce her nor to endure her. His position is like that of one who came to the Prophet* and said, "O Messenger of God, I have a wife who cannot turn back a touching hand." The Prophet said, "Divorce her"; to which he replied, "I love her." The Prophet responded, "Then, keep her." The Prophet commanded him to hold onto her, for if he divorces her he would yearn for her and become corrupt like her. Seeing that the man's heart was in anguish, he [the Prophet considered it preferable for him to continue his marriage and thus safeguard himself against corruption. If her faith be corrupted in squandering his possessions or in some other respect, he will remain in misery. [However,] if he remains silent and does not denounce [her deeds], he becomes a partaker of her transgression and a violator of the Almighty's command: "Ward off from yourselves and your families a fire." If he, on the other hand, denies and disputes [her ways], he will be miserable throughout his life.

For that reason, the Messenger of God took pains in encouraging people to adhere to the faith saying: "A woman may be married either for her possessions, her beauty, her reputation, or her religion; for if you do marry other than a religious woman, may your hands be rubbed with dirt [torit bat yadd]." Another hadith states: "He who marries a woman for her possessions and beauty loses both her beauty and her possessions; [but] he who marries her for the sake of her faith will be blessed by God with her possessions and her beauty." The Prophet also said, "A woman should not be married [only] for her beauty, because her beauty may destroy her; neither for her wealth, as this may make her tyrannical; [rather] marry the woman for her religious faith." He emphatically recommended religious faith, because such a woman would bolster up the [husband's] faith. If she is not pious, she will be an element of distraction and of trouble in her husband's religion.

[Good Character]

Good character is the second quality. It is an important requisite in the search for emptying the heart and in the pursuit of favorable surroundings for religion. For if she is vicious, ill-tongued, ill-mannered, and ungrateful, more harm than good will come from her. Toleration of a woman's tongue would try the saints. An Arab said, "Do not marry one of the following six types of women: an 'annnah [hypochondriac], a manndnah [upbraider], a hannnah [yearner], a hiddagh [coveier], a barragh [narcissist], or a shaddagh [prattler]. The 'annnah is one who excessively moans, complains, and [always] wraps her head.

Marrying a constantly ill [woman] or one who feigns illness is of no avail. The manndnah is one who is constantly needing her husband by saying, "I did such and such for you." The hannnah is one who yearns after a previous husband or after her offspring from some other husband. This, too, is among the things to be avoided. The hiddagh is one who looks at everything, covets it, and forces her husband to buy it. The barragh can be one of two: (a) one who spends the whole day fixing her face or making it up and beautifying it in order to give it a lustre, or (b) one who becomes angry at mealtime, thus eating only by herself and singing out her share from everything. A Yemeni expression which is appropriately used for a woman, or a child, who is not satisfied with the food given to her [or him], is 'baraqat al-mar'atu wa bararqat 'l-sabriyyu al-ta'amah; that is, to become angry at mealtime.

Al-shaddagh is one who prattles a great deal; in this context the Prophet said, "Almighty God detests the loudmouthed pratter." It is related that the Azdi traveler, during his journey, met Elias [the prophet] who ordered him to get married and discouraged him from celibacy. He then said, "Don't marry any of the following four types: a mukhl asi' rh [divorce-minded], a mubiriyah [boaster], an 'ahrah [harlot], or a naskh [conceited]." Al-mukhl asi' rh is one who asks for the divorce ('khul') every hour for no reason." Al-mubiriyah is one who boasts of the superiority of another and is proud of her worldly advantages, and al- 'ahrah is a loose woman who is known to have lovers and intimate companions. To her the Almighty referred when He said, "nor of loose conduct" [Kor. 4:25]. Al-naskh is one who adopts a haughty attitude toward her husband in deed and word: the word nashah designates that which is elevated above the ground.

'Ali used to say, "The worst characteristics of men constitute the best characteristics of women; namely, stinginess, pride, and cowardice. For if the woman is stingy, she will preserve her own and her husband's possessions; if she is proud, she will refrain from addressing loose and improper words to everyone; and if she is cowardly, she will dread everything and will therefore not go out of her house and will avoid compromising situations for fear of her husband. These accounts indicate the sum total of the good qualities sought in marriage.

[Beauty]

The third, beauty of face, is desired because through it fortification is attained. For [a man’s] natural disposition is generally not contented with an ugly woman, [even] when good character and physical beauty are often inseparable. What we have transmitted is encouragement to look for a pious woman and not marry one for her beauty, which does not discourage the cherishing of beauty, but rather discourages marry an ugly woman for her beauty alone [while she be] corrupt in religion. Beauty, per se, oftentimes makes marriage desirable and detracts from the importance of religion. Indicative of the regard given to beauty is the fact that closeness and love are often realized through it. For that reason the Shari’a enjoined the safeguarding of the means to intimacy, and seeing [the woman] before marriage was deemed desirable.

The Prophet said, “If God should incline the heart of one of you toward a woman, let him look at her, for it will bring them closer together.” That is to say, it will cause them to be closer to each other like the close of the epidermis to the endodermis, which is the inner skin [as opposed to] the epidermis [which] is the outer skin. He mentions that only to stress the degree of closeness. The Prophet* said, “There is something in the eyes of the Ašrār; therefore, if one of you wishes to marry one of their women, let him look at them.” It was said [in effect] that those women were “blear-eyed.” It was also said, “small-eyed.”

Some God-fearing men would not marry off their daughters until they are seen as a precaution against delusion. Al-
A’māsh said, “Every marriage occurring without looking ends in worry and sadness.” It is obvious that looking does not reveal character, religion, or wealth; rather, it distinguishes beauty from ugliness.

It was related that during the time of ‘Umar* a man got married. The man had colored his hair and the dyestuff had faded. The woman’s family complained to ‘Umar saying, “We thought he was a young man.” ‘Umar beat him excessively and said, “You have deceived the people.” It is related that Bilāl and ʿUḥayb came to a bedouin household and asked to marry their daughters. They were asked: “Who are you?” Bilāl said, “I am Bilāl and this is my brother, ʿUḥayb. We were misguided, but God has directed us; we were enslaved, but God freed us; we were dependent [on others], but God has made us independent; if you should give us wives, then thanks be to God; and if you should turn us away, then praise be to God.” They [the household] answered, “Rather, you will marry, and thanks be to God.” ʿUḥayb said to Bilāl, “Would that you had mentioned our association and dealings with the Messenger* of God.” He replied, “Be quiet. I spoke the truth and the truth will get you married.”

One may be deceived both in beauty and in character; therefore it is desirable to avoid deception in beauty by looking, and [deception] in character by description and inquiry. It is desirable that this precede marriage. A description of her character and beauty should not be sought from any but one who is keen, who is truthful, who is well versed in the apparent and the hidden [qualities], who is not predisposed toward her lest he should praise her too much, and who does not envy her lest he should not praise her enough. In stating the basis for marriage and in describing the would-be wives, the natural disposition leans toward exaggeration and excessiveness. Few are the ones who are truthful and are inclined to modesty; rather, deception and enticement often predominate. Caution, therefore, is important for one who would guard himself against longing for a woman other than his wife.

As for the man whose purpose in having a wife is mere observation of the sunna, bearing children, or caring for the house, should he renounce beauty, he would draw nearer to asceticism; because seeking beauty, in short, is a worldly interest even though in the case of some individuals [it] may be an aid to religion.

Abū Sulaymān al-Dārānī said, “Indifference (zdhd) [to worldly interests may be] in anything, even in women.” Thus a man [might] marry an old woman because he has preferred to renounce worldly delights. Mālik b. Dinār used to say, “Many a man among you would refrain from marrying an orphan, whose feeding and clothing would cost little and who would be easily satisfied, thus gaining merit [before God]. Rather, he would marry the daughter of so and so—meaning prominent people—who would make many demands of him saying, ‘Clothe me with such and such.’” Ahmad b. Hanbal preferred a one-eyed [woman] over her sister who was beautiful. For he asked: “Who is the better behaved of the two?” He was told: “The one-eyed.” He replied: “Give her to me in marriage.” Such is the constant endeavor of one who does not seek mere sensual pleasures. If someone cannot secure his faith without a source of pleasure, then let him seek beauty because enjoyment of what is lawful strengthens faith.

It has been said that if a woman is beautiful, of good character, with black eyes and hair, large eyes, white complexion, loves her husband, and has an eye to no other man, she is in the image of the houris [haussar].48 For Almighty God has ascribed to the women of paradise this description in the verse, “the good and beautiful” [Kor. 60:70] (by “good” He meant “those enjoying good manners”); in the verse “of modest gaze” [87:48]; and in the verse “lovers (‘umah, friends” [56:37]. (By “lovers,” He means someone who is in love with her husband and desirous of seducing him so as to complete her beauty. By al-hausr, He meant whiteness; al-haussar is a woman with intense whiteness of the sclera, profound blackness of the eyes matching the profound blackness of the hair, and big, wide-set] eyes.)

The Prophet* said, “The best of your women is one who pleases her husband when he looks at her, who obeys him when he commands her, and guards his memory and his possessions when he is absent.”49 Her husband will be delighted to look at her if she loves him.

[Dowry]

The fourth quality is that her dowry should be small. The Messenger* of God declared that “The best women are those whose faces are the most beautiful and whose dowries are the smallest.”48 He enjoined against excessiveness in dowries.49 The Messenger* of God married one of his wives for a dowry of ten dirhams40 and household furnishings that consisted of a hand mill, a jug, a pillow made of skin stuffed with palm fibers,41 and a stone (‘iyya);42 in the case of another, he feasted with two measures43 of barley,44 and for another, with two measures of dates and two of mush (sa’ay).45

Umar also used to enjoin against excessive dowries and used to say, “In getting married and in marrying of his daughters, the Messenger* of God never spent more than 400 dirhams.”46 If paying excessive dowries for women were a virtue, the Messenger* of God would have been the first to do so. One of the companions of the Messenger* of God was married for a date-fruit of gold equal to five dirhams.47 Sa’id b. al-Musayyab married his daughter to Abû Hurayrah* for two dirhams. He then took her personally to him by night, let her in through the door, then departed. Seven days later, he came back and greeted her. Even if he [Sa’id] had married for ten dirhams to be different from the rest of the ummah, there would be nothing wrong with his act.

A khabar states that “a woman’s blessing is in marrying and in bearing children quickly,”48 and “in the reasonableness of her dowry.”49 He also said, “The most blessed among them are the ones with the smallest dowries.”50

Just as it is undesirable for the woman’s dowry to be excessive, it is undesirable for the man to ask about the possessions of the woman. Marriage should never be motivated by avidity for wealth. Al-Thawri51 said, “Should one marry and ask ‘What does the woman possess?’ know ye that he is a thief; and should a person give them a present, it should not be with the purpose of forcing them to reciprocate with more; likewise, should they give him a present, the expectation of receiving more [than they gave] is immoral. Exchanging gifts is desirable, and results in friendship.” The Prophet* said, “If you exchange gifts, you will love each other.”52 As pertains to seeking more, it is included in the words of the Almighty: “And show not favor, seeking worldly gain” [Kor. 74:6], that is to say, give [not] in order to receive more; also in the Almighty’s words: “That which ye give in usury in order that it may increase on (other) people’s property” [30:39], for usurious interest is the increase, and that [giving a gift] is an attempt to increase the principal, though it is not usurious. All such attempts are detested and are regarded as heretical in marriage. For they resemble trading and gambling, and their aim corrupts marriage.

[Childbearing]

The fifth quality is that the woman be able to bear children.
Should she be known to be barren, then one should avoid marrying her. The Prophet* said, “Marry the loving child-bearer”;63
if she has no husband and her affairs are not known, the decision should be based on her health and her youth for, given these two qualities, she will most likely be capable of bearing children.

[Virginity]

The sixth quality is that she should be a virgin. The Prophet* said to Jäbir, who had married an unwed deflowered woman, “Would that she were a virgin so you could daily with her and she with you.”64 Virginity has three advantages:

(a) First, the virgin will love the husband and feel close to him, which will favorably influence their conjugal attachment.
The Prophet* said, “Marry the loving (woman)”; for the natural disposition is to be attached to the first mate with whom one has had intimate relations. On the other hand, a woman who has experienced men and life may not be satisfied with some of the qualities that differ from those she is accustomed to, and may, therefore, loathe the husband.

(b) Second, it engenders a greater measure of his love for her, as it is a man’s nature to be somewhat repelled by a woman who has been touched by another husband; that would contradict [a man’s] nature regardless of what might be said [to the contrary]. Certain natures find it more repulsive than others.

(c) Third, the virgin does not yearn after the first husband, because, in general, the surest65 love is that which is engendered with the first loved one.

[Good Lineage]

The seventh quality is that the wife should be of good lineage, that is to say, she should come from a religious and righteous background, because she will bring up her daughters and sons. If she is not well bred, she will not be able to raise her children well. For that reason the Prophet* said, “Beware of the green dung (khudra’ al-diman).” It was asked, “What is the green dung?” He said, “The beautiful woman with an evil origin.”66 The Prophet* said, “Exercise care in choosing [wives] for your sperm, for a hereditary quality is wont to return.”68

[Not a Close Relative]

The eighth quality is that she should not be a close relative, as that would lessen desire. The Prophet* said, “Don’t marry close relatives for then the child is born scrappy”;69 that is to say, weak; such is the weakening effect it [marrying close relatives] has on desire. For desire is excited by the deep emotions which result from sight and touch; emotions are strengthened by whatever is unfamiliar and new. On the other hand, what is familiar and seen continuously renders the faculties incapable of fully appreciating it [desire], being affected by it, or becoming aroused through it. These are the qualities desired in women.

[INQUIRY INTO THE HUSBAND’S CHARACTER]

It is incumbent upon the guardian also to examine the qualities of the husband and to look after his daughter so as not to give her in marriage to one who is ugly, ill-mannered, weak in faith, negligent in upholding her rights, or unequal to her in descent. The Prophet* has said, “Marriage is enslavement; let one, therefore, be careful in whose hands he places his daughter.”70 Exercising caution on her behalf is important, because she becomes a slave by the marriage and cannot be freed from it, while the husband is able to obtain divorce at all times. Whoever gives his daughter in marriage to a person who is unjust, licentious, heretical, or an inebriate commits a crime against his religion and exposes himself to the wrath of God for having severed his parental tie by having made a bad choice. A man said to al-Hasan,71 “A number of suitors have asked for my daughter’s hand in marriage; to whom should I give her?” He replied, “To the one who fears God; because if he loves her, he will be kind to her; and if he hates her, he will not wrong her.” The Prophet* said, “Whoever gives his daughter in marriage to a licentious man has betrayed her womb.”
CHAPTER THREE

Etiquette of Cohabitation,
What Should Take Place
During the Marriage, and the Obligations of Husband and Wife

FIRST PART OF THIS CHAPTER
Etiquette of Cohabitation

[OBLIGATIONS INCUMBENT UPON THE HUSBAND]
As for the husband, he is obligated to observe moderation and good manners in twelve matters: feasting, cohabitation, dallying, exercising authority, jealousy, support, teaching, apportionment, politeness at times of discord, intimate relations, producing children, and separation through divorce.

[Feasting]
The first etiquette is feasting, and that is desirable. Anas* said, "The Prophet* of God saw a trace of paleness in the face of 'Abd al-Rahmân b. 'Awf* and said 'What is this?' To which he replied, 'I married a woman for a date-pit of gold.' The Prophet replied, 'May God bless her for you. Have a feast, even with a sheep.' The Prophet of God feasted for .ToArray* with dates and 5ănîg. "The Prophet* said, "The food of the first day is an obligation; of the second, a sunna; and of the third, a [cause for good] reputation; he who spreads the news is made known by God.* Only Ziyâd b. 'Abdullah mentions it as being 5arîh.*

It is desirable to congratulate him [the husband]: thus one who enters [the house of] the husband should say, "May God bless you and yours and bring you together in prosperity."" Abû Hurayrah* recounted that the Prophet* made it a command.

The publicizing of marriage is desirable. The Prophet said,
"The separator of the lawful and unlawful [in marriage] is the tambourine and the voice."" He also said, "Make known this marriage, perform it in the mosques, and celebrate it with the beating of tambourines." It is related that al-Rubayyi, the daughter of Mu‘awwidh, said, "The Prophet* came and entered upon me the morning that my marriage was consummated. He sat on my bed while some of our young girls were beating their tambourines for us and lamenting those of my forefathers who had been killed, until one of them said, 'and among us there is a prophet who knows what the morrow holds,' to which he replied,"Don't say this and say only what you were saying before.'"

[Conjugal Harmony]

The second etiquette: good conduct with them [wives] and tolerating offense from them out of pity for their mental deficiencies. Almighty God declared, "But consort with them in kindness" [Kor. 4:19]. He also said in upholding their rights, "And they have taken a strong pledge from you" [4:21]. He [God] also said, "And what your right hands [possess]" [4:36] (‘Ali). Some say that [the verse] refers to women.

The last commandments that the Prophet* left were three, which he continued to utter until he stammered and his words became incoherent. He kept saying: "Pray, pray!" Do not impose upon your slaves that which you could not support. Fear God; fear God as concerns your women for they are like putty in your hands, that is, captives. You have taken them as a trust from God, and intimate relations with them was made lawful through the word of God."18

The Prophet* also said, "If a man is tolerant of his wife's bad manners, God will grant him the same recompense that He granted Job for his affliction; whoever tolerates the bad manners of her husband, will be granted by God the same recompense that was granted to Aisyah the wife of Pharaoh."14 Know ye that good conduct with her does not mean not harming her, but rather enduring harm from her and forbearance in the face of her fickleness and anger in emulation of the Prophet*; for his wives used to talk back to him, and on occasion once would leave him for the whole night.16

‘Umar’s wife talked back to him and he said to her, "Do you talk back to me, O foolish woman?" And she said, "The wives of the Prophet talk back to him and he is better than you." To which ‘Umar retorted, "How inappropriate of Hafṣah* to talk back to him!" Then he said to Hafṣah, "Don't be deceived by the conduct of the daughter of ‘Ā’ishah of Ibn Abī Qubāfah [sr], for she is the dearest of the Prophet's wives; and he warned her against talking back."18

It was also related that one wife hit the Prophet* in the chest, so her mother scolded her. The Prophet* said, "Leave her alone; they [wives] do worse than that."18 He and ‘Ā’ishah got into an argument to the point that Abū Bakr was called upon to arbitrate, and the Prophet took him as a witness. So the Prophet* said to her, "Are you going to talk, or shall I?" She replied, "You talk, but say only the truth." Abū Bakr struck her until her mouth bled, and said to her, "O enemy of yourself, does he utter anything but the truth?" So she took refuge with the Prophet* and sat beside him. The Prophet* then told him, "you were not called for this, nor did we desire this of you." She told him once in anger, "And you are the one who claims to be the Prophet of God!" So the Prophet* smiled and bore that out of forbearance and kindness. He used to say to her, "I know when you are angry and when you are pleased." To which she replied, "And how do you know it?" He said, "When you are pleased, you say 'No, by the God of Muhammad'; and when you are angry you say, 'No, by the God of Abraham.' " She said, "You are right; I leave your name out." It is said that the first love that took place in Islam was the love of the Prophet* for ‘Ā’ishah.* He used to say to her, "I am to you like Abū Zar* vis-à-vis Umm Zar*; however, I won't divorce you." He used to say to his wives, "Don’t talk ill of ‘Ā’ishah to me for, by God, I have not received revelation under the cover of any of you but [rather under] hers." Anas* used to say that the Prophet* was the kindest of all people toward women and children.

[Toleration of Wives]

The third: Dalliance, jesting, and playfulness add to the toleration of offense; for these delight the hearts of women. The Prophet* used to joke with them and lower himself to the level of their minds in deeds and manners, to the extent that it was related that he* used to race ‘Ā’ishah; she won once and he won several times, so he * said, "Now we’re even." 27 In a khabar it is related that he * was one of the merriest with his wives. 28 ‘Ā‘ishah [once] said, "I heard the voices of some Ethiopians and others playing on the day of ‘Āshūrā’. 29 The Prophet * asked me, ‘Do you wish to see them play?’ I said, ‘Yes.’ He sent after them and they came. The Messenger * of God stood between the two doors, placed his palm on the door and extended his arm; I leaned with my chin against his arm. They began to play, and I looked on. The Prophet * kept saying, ‘That’s enough (hashuki)’; and I would say, ‘Be quiet,’ twice or three times. Then he said, ‘‘Ā‘ishah, that’s enough!’ So I said, ‘Yes.’ He pointed to them and they departed. 30

The Prophet * of God said, "the most perfect of believers in faith are those who are the finest in manners and most gentle toward their wives." 31 He said, "The best among you are the most charitable toward their wives, and I am the best among you toward my wives." 32 In spite of his harshness, ‘Umar * said, "It is necessary that a man be like a child in his family;" but if they seek what he possesses, he should be found a man. 33 Luqman * said, "A wise man should be like a child in his family, and when he is in public, he should be found a man." In a commentary on the related khabar, [it is stated that] "God detests the jā‘ari al-jawwad," 34 that is, one who is harsh toward his family and who is arrogant. The same explanation has been offered for the term ‘utul used by Almighty God [Kor. 68:13]: ‘or it has been said that ‘utul designates one who has a harsh tongue and who is cruel toward his family.

The Prophet * said to Jābir, "Would that she were a virgin, so you could daily with her and she with you." 35

[Asserting Authority]

The Fourth: not so to indulge in dalliance, good manners, and conformity in following her whims that he would corrupt her manners and lose respect altogether in her eyes. Rather, he should observe moderation, never abandon dignity and seriousness no matter how evil he sees, nor open the door to abetting abomination; rather, whenever he sees an act which violates divine legislation and manliness (mar’ah), 36 he should become resentful and angry. Al-Hasan said, "Verily whoever obeys the whims of his wife will be cast by God into the Fire." 37 ‘Umar said, "Disagree with your wives, because disagreement with them is a blessing." It was also said, "Consult them, then disagree with them." 38

The Prophet * said, "Miserable is he who is a slave to his wife." 39 He said so because if the husband obeys her whims, he becomes her slave and thereby miserable; for God made him possessor over the woman but if he makes her possessor of himself, he reverses the order of things, overturns the matter, and obeys Satan when he said, "and surely I will command them and they will change Allah’s creation" [Kor. 4:119]. It is a man’s right to be followed, not to be a follower. God has appointed men as trustees over women, and has called the husband "master"; and the Lord has said, "and they met her lord and master at the door" [Kor. 12:25]. For if the master is transformed into a slave, then he has exchanged God’s grace for thanklessness. 40 The woman’s behavior depends on you: If you slacken her reins a little, she will run off for a long distance; should you loosen the harness a span (jīra), 41 she will take a cubit (dhiri), 42 but if you restrain her and treat her firmly where firmness is called for, you will be her master.

Al- Shā fi * said, "There are three who will insult you if you honor them: the woman, the servant, and the Nabataean." 43 He was referring to pure kindness and not harshness mixed with compliance, or coarseness with gentleness.

Arab women used to teach their daughters [how] to test their husbands. One would say to her daughter, "Test your husband before taking a step and before showing boldness toward him. Remove the edge of his spear; should he remain quiet, hack bones with his sword; and if he should still be quiet, then put the saddle on his back and ride him, for he is your donkey." At any rate, it is with justice that the heavens and the earth are upheld; whatever exceeds its limits turns into its opposite.

For that reason it is necessary to follow the path of moderation both in disagreement and in agreement, and to follow the truth in it all, so as to be safe from their [women’s] evil, because their scheming is great. 44 their evil is widespread; their predomin-nant characteristics are bad manners and weak minds, and this cannot be set straight except through a certain amount of kindness mixed with diplomacy. The Prophet* said, "A virtuous woman amongst women is like an a’sam among a hundred crows"; an a’sam is a [rare] white-footed crow.

In the will of Luqmán to his son [it is stated]: "My son, beware of the evil woman, for she will age you before your time; and beware of the evils of women, as they do not encourage good deeds; and be very careful of the better ones among them." The Prophet* said, "Beware of the three causes of poverty," and among them he listed the "evil woman" for she is the one who ages a man before his time. In other words, "If you come to her, she will curse you; and if you are away from her, she will be unfaithful to you." The Prophet* said concerning the best of women, "If [only] you were the companions of Joseph";* that is, turning Abū Bakr away from prayer indicates that, on your part, you have ignored the truth and turned to pleasure. Almighty God said when they [women] revealed the secret of the Prophet,* "If you two turn in repentance to Him, your hearts are indeed so inclined" [Kor. 66:4 (‘Ali)],* that is, so disposed. He [God] said that about the best of the Prophet’s* wives. The Prophet* said, "No people dominated by a woman can succeed." ‘Umar scolded his wife when she talked back to him saying, "You are no more than a toy in a corner of the house; if we have need of you [we take you], otherwise, you sit as you are.”

Thus there is evil and weakness in them [women]; while diplomacy and harshness are a cure for evil, consolation and mercy are the cure for weakness. The skillful doctor is one who can estimate the amount of cure needed for the ailment; so let the man first know her character through experience, then let him deal with her in a manner that will set her straight in accordance with her state.

[jealousy]

The fifth: moderation in jealousy; which means that one should not overlook preliminaries whose consequences may be undesirable, and should not go to extremes in misjudging, in acting adversely, or in spying upon concealed matters.

ETIQUETTE OF COHABITATION

The Prophet* of God enjoined against seeking out the faults of women—that is, against unexpectedly coming upon women. When the Prophet returned from a journey, he said before entering [the city of] Medina, "Don’t come upon your wives at night." Two men disagreed with him and went ahead [of the rest], and each saw in his home what he detested. In a famous khābār [it is stated]: "A woman is like a rib: if you attempt to straighten it, you break it; leave it alone and enjoy it in spite of its crookedness." This refers to rectifying her character.

The Prophet* said, "There is a type of jealousy which God detests, and that is the unjustifiable jealousy of a man over his wife when there is no justification [for suspicion] because that suspicion we have decreed against. Certain [types of] suspicion are sinful. ‘Ali* said, "Do not indulge excessively in showing jealousy over your wife lest she be accused of evil behavior because of you." However, jealousy in its proper place is both necessary and commendable. The Prophet* said: "Almighty God experiences jealousy, and the believer experiences jealousy as well; Almighty God's jealousy stems from the believer's perpetuation of what God has enjoined against." The Prophet* said, "Do you marvel at the jealousy of Sa’d*? By God, I am more jealous than he, and God is more jealous than I." Because of Almighty God's jealousy, He has prohibited abominations, whether manifest or hidden. Forgiveness is dearer to none than to God; for that reason He has sent warners and preachers. And praise is dearer to none than to God; for that reason He has promised Paradise.

The Messenger* of God said, "I saw on the night [Mi’raj] [that] I was taken through Paradise (laylata utirya bī bī al-jannah) a mansion and a maid in its courtyard; I inquired, 'To whom does this mansion belong?' and I was told, 'To 'Umar.' I wanted to look at her, but I remembered, O 'Umar, your jealousy,'" ‘Umar wept and said, "Would I be jealous because of you, O Messenger of God?"

Al-Ḥasan used to say, "Do you call upon your wives to jostle uncouth men in the market places? May God curse those who are not jealous."
dared to disagree because he knew that times had changed, and the father was angry with him for openly expressing disagreement without giving the reason. The Prophet* also permitted them [women] to go out especially during feasts; they could not go out without the approval of their husbands.

Nowadays, it is permissible for a chaste woman to go out with the permission of her husband; however, remaining [at home] is safer. She should not go out except for an important purpose; going out for the sake of looking [about] and for unimportant matters detracts from virtue and may lead to corruption. If she goes out, she must avoid looking at men. We are not saying that the man’s face is shameful for her to look at as is the woman’s face for him. Rather, it is for her like the face of the beardless boy which a man should be prevented from seeing when sight may result in evil; when evil is not likely to result, sight should not be prevented. For men throughout the ages have had unveiled faces while women go out veiled; if their faces were shameful for women to look at, men would have been commanded to be veiled or prevented from going out except for a necessary purpose.

[Support of the Woman]

The sixth: moderation in spending. One should not be stingy toward them nor should he be extravagant; rather he should be moderate. The Almighty said, “and eat and drink but exceed not the bounds” [Kor. 7:31 (‘Ali)]. He also said, “And let not thy hand be chained to thy neck nor open it with a complete opening” [17:29]. The Messenger* of God said, “The most favored among you is the one who is most generous toward his wife.” The Prophet* also said, “A dinar spent for the sake of God, a dinar spent for ransoming a slave, a dinar offered [as charity] to a poor man, and a dinar spent on your wife—the one that earns you the greatest reward is the one spent on your wife.”

It was related that ‘Ali* had four wives and that he used to buy every four days a dirham’s worth of meat for each. Al-
Hasan* said, “Some men spent plenty, but when it came to furnishings and clothes they were tight.” Ibn Sirin* said, “It is desirable that a man prepare fadlahyakah (pastry) every week for his wife; for even though sweet foods are not among the necessary things, to completely omit them is a stingy practice.”

It is desirable that he should order her to offer as charity whatever food remains [after the meal] and whatever would spoil if kept. This is the least thing to do as far as charity is concerned. The wife has the right to do this as circumstances dictate without specific permission from the husband.

He should not keep to himself, to the exclusion of his family, a delectable food. Not feeding them of it would incite malice and render it difficult to have a harmonious relationship. If he decides to withhold it [from them], let him eat in seclusion so that his family does not know about it; nor should he describe to them food which he does not intend to give them.

When he eats, let the whole family sit at his table; for Sufyan* [al-Thawri] said, “We have been told that God and His angels invoke prayers on the members of the household who eat together.”

The most important thing for the husband to observe in spending is to feed the family from what is gained lawfully and not to pursue evil endeavors for their sake, as that constitutes a crime against them rather than upholding their rights. We have already mentioned the pertinent akhbar when talking about the disadvantages of marriage.

[Instruction Concerning Menstruation]

The seventh: that the married man should know enough about the matter of menstruation to enable him to take necessary precautions; he also should teach his wife the rules of prayer: which prayers should be performed during menstruation and which should not. He has been commanded to safeguard her against the [hell]Fire according to the words of the Almighty, “Ward off from yourselves and your families a Fire” [Kor. 66:6].

It is incumbent upon the husband to teach her the proper beliefs of the followers of the sunna, to remove from her heart every innovation should she lend an ear to it, and to make her fear God should she be lax in matters of religion.

The husband should also teach her the precepts governing menstruation and irregular menstrual flow, and the taking of precautionary measures. Information on menstruation is lengthy, but what a woman must be taught concerning menstruation are the prayers she should perform. If the blood stops shortly before the sunset (maagrha by [the end of] one prostration, then it is incumbent upon her to perform the noon (zuhr) and the afternoon (asr) prayers; if it stops before morning by [the end of] one rak‘ah then she should perform the maghra and ‘ishā’. This is the least that the women ought to observe.

If the husband is diligent in teaching her, she will not have to go out and ask the ulema about it. If the husband’s knowledge does not encompass such matters, and if he should ask on her behalf, conveying to her the information from the mufti, then there is no need for her to go out. Otherwise, she has the right to go out and ask; in fact, she is obligated to do so, and the husband would be in defiance should he prevent her. No matter how much she learns about her obligations, she should not go out to attend a dhikr to nor to receive instruction in superfluous knowledge without the consent of her husband.

Whenever a woman neglects one of the obligations imposed upon her by menstruation and irregular menstrual flow, and the husband does not teach her [concerning these matters], he, too, becomes her partner in sin.

[Equality Among Wives]

The eighth: If he has several wives, then he should deal equitably with them and not favor one over the other; should he go on a journey and desire to have one [of his wives] accompany him, he should cast lots (agras) among them, for such was the practice of the Messenger*. If he cheats a woman of her night, he should make up for it, for making up for it is a duty upon him. For that reason it becomes necessary for him to learn the rules of apportionment which would take a long time to explain here. The Messenger* of God said, “Whoever has two wives and favors one over the other—that is to say, does not deal equitably between them—he comes to the Day of Judgment bent to one side."\textsuperscript{35}

He should be equitable in giving and in cohabiting at night. As concerns love and intimate relations, these do not come under the rubric of choice. Almighty God has decreed, "Ye will not be able to deal equally between (your) wives, however much ye wish (to do so)" [Kor. 4:129]; that is to say, you cannot deal equally with regard to the desires of the heart and the preferences of the soul from which stems inequality in intimate relations. The Messenger* used to be equitable to his wives in giving and cohabiting at night saying, "O Lord, this is the limit of my ability within my means, I have no access to that which You possess and I do not have,"\textsuperscript{44} by which he meant love. He loved A‘ishah* most,\textsuperscript{77} and the rest of his wives knew that. During his [last] illness, he was carried every day and every night in order to spend a night with each one of his wives. He would say, "Where am I supposed to be tomorrow?" So one of his wives saw through his question and said, "He is asking for the day with A‘ishah." So they [his wives] said, "O Messenger of God, we permit you to stay at A‘ishah’s house, because it is difficult for you to be carried every night." He replied, "Are you agreeable to that?" They replied, "Yes," so he said, "Take me then to A‘ishah’s house."\textsuperscript{78}

Whenever one wife grants her night to another with the husband’s consent, the second wife gains the right to that night. The Prophet* used to allot time among his wives. He wanted to divorce Sawdah, the daughter of Zam‘ah, when she became old, so she granted her night to A‘ishah and asked him to keep her in order that she [Sawdah] might remain in the circle of his wives. He left her and did not apportion for her; rather, he apportioned two nights for A‘ishah and one night each for the rest of his wives.\textsuperscript{79}

On account of his* fair justice and virility whenever he desired one of his wives whose turn was not due and had intercourse with her, he would then visit during the same day or night the rest of his wives. It has been related that A‘ishah* said the Messenger* of God visited all of his wives in one night.\textsuperscript{80} Anas also related that he* visited all nine wives in one morning.\textsuperscript{81}

The ninth: as pertains to discord (nushaa‘)\textsuperscript{42} and whatever dissension takes place between them that cannot be reconciled. If it should ensue from both sides or from the husband, and the wife wants to dominate the husband, and if it is not possible for him to set her straight, then two arbitrators should be called representing each of the two families [husband’s and wife’s] to look into the matter and to reconcile them. "If they desire amendment [reconciliation], Allah will make them of one mind"[Kor. 4:35]. Umar sent an arbitrator to a couple, but he returned without succeeding in reconciling them, whereupon he [Umar] beat him saying, "Almighty God says, ‘If they desire amendment [reconciliation], Allah will make them of one mind.’" So the man returned and with [good] intention[s] and gentleness toward them, he reconciled them.

However, if the discord is the woman’s fault, it is the husband’s right to chastise and induce her forcibly to obey, since men are guardians over women. Likewise, should she be remiss in performing her prayers, it is his right to force her to perform them. However, he should chastise her gradually: That is to say, first he should preach, then warn, then threaten: should he not succeed, he should turn his back to her in bed, sleep in another bed, or avoid her—while still remaining in the house—from one night up to three. Should all of this fail, then he should beat her but not excessively, that is, to the point that he would inflict only pain but without breaking a bone or causing her to bleed. He should not strike her face for that is forbidden.

The Messenger* of God was asked, “What rights can a woman claim from a man?” He replied, “To feed her when he eats, to clothe her when he is clothed, [but] not to be insolent or beat her excessively. He is to avoid her only in cohabitation [that is, desert her bed].”\textsuperscript{88} He can be angry with her and avoid her over matters of religion up to ten or twenty [days], or up to a month; the Prophet* did so to Zamzam when he sent her a present and she returned it to him. The wife at whose house he was staying said to him, “She has insulted you by returning your presents,"\textsuperscript{84} that is to say, she has humiliated and belittled you." The Prophet* replied, “You [wives] are too despicable in the sight of God to insult me!" Whereupon he became angry with all of them for a month, then returned to them.

[Etiquette of Intimate Relations]

The tenth: on the etiquette of intimate relations. It is desirable that it should commence in the name of God and with the [following] recitation: Say, "He is God, the One and Only" [Kor. 112:1]; then he should glorify (takhār) and exalt (tahāli) His name saying, "In the name of God, Most High, Most Great; O God, cause it to be a good progeny if you cause it to issue forth from my loins." The Prophet* said, "If one of you say when he comes upon his wife, 'O God, avert the devil from me and avert the devil from what You have granted us.' Then should a child result, the devil shall not hurt him."

When you near ejaculation, say to yourself without moving your lips: 'Praise be to God Who has created humans out of fluid, and made thereof relatives and in-laws, for thy Lord is omnipotent.' One of the men of hadith used to raise his voice in praise to the extent that the members of the household could hear his voice. Then he would turn away from the qublah, and would not face the qublah during coitus out of deference for the qublah. He should also cover himself and his wife with a garment. The Messenger* of God used to cover his head and lower his voice, saying to the woman, "Remain quiet." A khabar says, "If one of you should have intimate relations with his wife, you should not denude yourselves completely like two onagers,"* that is, two donkeys.

Let him proceed with gentle words and kisses. The Prophet* said, "Let none of you come upon his wife like an animal, and let there be an emissary between them." He was asked, "What is this emissary, O Messenger of God?" He said, "The kiss and [sweet] words." He* also said, "There are three qualities which are considered deficiencies in a man: one, that he should meet someone whose acquaintance he wishes to make but parts from him before learning his name and lineage; second, that he should be treated kindly and reject the kindnesses done unto him; and third, that he should approach his concubine or wife and have sexual contact with her before exchanging tender words and caresses, consequently, he sleeps with her and fulfills his needs before she fulfills hers."***

Intimate relations are undesirable during three nights of the month: the first, the last, and the middle. It is said that the devil is present during copulation on these nights, and it is also said that the devils copulate during these nights. It was related that ‘Ali, Mu‘āwiyyah, and Abū Hurayrah also frowned upon it [during these nights]. Certain ulema recommended intimate relations on Friday and the night before it [Thursday] in fulfillment of one of the two interpretations of the Prophet’s* words, "May God bless the one who purifies and performs the ablution, etc."***

Once the husband has attained his fulfillment, let him tarry until his wife also attains hers. Her orgasm (nasil) may be delayed, thus exciting her desire; to withdraw quickly is harmful to the woman. Difference in the nature of [their] reaching a climax causes discord whenever the husband ejaculates first. Congruence in attaining a climax is more gratifying to her because the man is not preoccupied with his own pleasure, but rather with hers; for it is likely that the woman might be shy. It is desirable that he should have intimate relations with her once every four nights; that is more just, for the [maximum] number of wives is four which justifies this span. It is true that intimate relations should be more or less frequent in accordance to her need to remain chaste, for to satisfy her is his duty. If seeking intimate relations [by the woman] is not established, it causes the same difficulty in the same demand and the fulfillment thereof.

He should not approach her during menstruation, immediately after it, or before major ablution (ghabl), for that is forbidden according to the decree of the Book. It has been said that it would engender leprosy in the offspring. The husband is entitled to enjoy all parts of her body during menstruation but not to have sodomy; intercourse during menstruation is forbidden (harīm) because it is harmful, and sodomy will cause permanent harm; for that reason it [sodomy] is more strongly prohibited than intimate relations during menstruation. The words of the Almighty state, "so go to your tilth as ye will." [Kor.
whether it is permissible or reprehensible. Those who consider it unconditionally permissible include: (b) those who forbid it in all cases; (c) those who say it is permissible with a condition; (d) those who say it is permissible with the consent of the woman, which is forbidden rather than coitus interruptus. It is reprehensible for someone residing in Mecca not to engage in coitus interruptus every year; this reprehensible applies to what should take precedence and is more reprehensible for someone in the habit of being preoccupied with dhikr or prayer; but not with the free woman. Concerning the virtue of having offspring, and related concerning the Prophet: "A man has never had offspring with his wife, and is thus decreed for him the reward of being the cause for his offspring who fights for the cause of God and his wife." He said so because if such a son is born, he would receive the reward of being the cause for his offspring. Even though Almighty God is the creator, the one who strengthens him for jihad. His partner to exist is the act of coitus at the time of penetration. We have stated that there is no prohibition of prohibition and purification for the couple, possible only by text or by analogy with a. Rather, we have coitus—namely, abstaining from marriage along from intimate relations after marriage, or after penetration; all such abstentions are not acts of unlawfulness for the progeny is formed by the sperm being transferred to the uterus, which comes from four causes: marriage, then copulation, then patience until emission takes place after intercourse, then waiting until the sperm is implanted in the uterus. Some of these causes are more closely related than others. [Thus] abstaining from the fourth is like abstaining from the third; likewise, the third is similar to the second, and the second is like the first. All that is not the same as abortion or the burying of girls alive (wa’d).

These two things, in effect, constitute a crime against an already existing person; and that also has stages: The first stage of existence is that the sperm should lodge in the uterus, merge with the fluid of the woman, and become thus receptive to life; to interfere with this process constitutes a crime. If it develops into an embryo and becomes attached [a fetus], then the crime becomes more serious. If the spirit is breathed into it and the created being takes form, then the crime [of abortion] becomes more serious still. The crime is most serious after the fetus is born alive [then buried if it is a girl]. We have said that the initial stage of existence is the planting of the sperm in the uterus, not emission from the urethra; for the offspring is not produced by the sperm of the male alone but from the agglutination of the mates, either from both his and her fluid or from his fluid and the blood of menes, and that the blood plays, in relation to it, the same role as milk to its coagulator; the sperm from the man is necessary in coagulating the blood of the menes as the thickening agent (rūbūh) is for milk since through it the coagulator gels. However that might be, a woman’s fluid is a fundamental element in coagulation.

The two fluids are likened unto an offer and related acceptance which result in the consummation of a contract. Whomever makes an offer and goes back on it before it is accepted has breached the contract by rendering it null and void. Whenever an offer and related acceptance take place, rescission becomes a nullification, an annulment, and a severance. As no child can issue forth from a sperm in the vertebra, likewise [a child would not be created] after the expulsion [of the sperm] from the urethra unless it mixes with the fluid or the blood of the woman. This is, therefore, a clear analogy.

Should you say: "But coitus interruptus is not reprehensible on account of opposing the existence of a child, it is likely to be reprehensible on account of the motive behind it; for it cannot be motivated except by a corrupt intention which is blemished by concealed polytheism." I would answer that the motivations for coitus interruptus are five:

1. The first pertains to concubines who serve to preserve property from the destruction entailed by the right to manumission; the purpose of maintaining property by avoiding manumission and heading off its causes is not prohibited.

2. The second, preserving the beauty of the woman and her portliness in order to maintain enjoyment, and protect her life against the danger of childbirth (tuliy); and this, too, is not prohibited.

3. The third, fear of excessive hardship on account of numerous offspring, and guarding against the excessive pursuit of gain and against the need for resorting to evil means. This, too, is not prohibited, because encountering fewer hardships is an aid to religion [faith]. Without doubt, perfection and virtue ensue from dependence on and faith in God’s guaranty which is expressed in His words, “No creature is there crawling on the earth, but its provision rests on God” [Kor. 2:6 (Arberry, vol. 1:239)]. Falling short of the apex of perfection, and abandoning what is preferable is not a criminal act. However, we cannot say that taking consequences into account as well as preserving possessions and hoarding them are prohibited, even though they are contrary to dependence [on God].

4. The fourth, fear of having female children because of the stigma involved in getting them married, as was the custom of the Arabs in burying their female progeny (fī qutīshīm al-thāth). This would be an evil intention if marriage or coitus are to be abandoned on its account; a person would be guilty of the intention but not of abstinence from marriage and coitus; so likewise in coitus interruptus. Corruption engendered by belief in disgrace (ma’arrāh) is stronger in the sunna of the Prophet*. Such would be comparable to the circumstance of a woman who avoids marriage out of disdain for having to lie under a man and thus attempts to emulate them. Undesirability [in this case] is not due to abstinence from marriage per se.

The fifth, that the woman might abstain from having children on account of arrogance, excessive cleanliness, fear of labor pains, childbirth, and nursing. Such was the custom of the Kharijite women in their excessive use of water to the point that they used to perform the prayers during the days of menses and would not enter the bathroom except naked [because] of their excessive cleanliness. This too is an innovation which contradicts the sunna and manifests a corrupt intent. One among them sought permission to see ‘A‘ishah* when she came to Basra, but she [*A‘ishah] did not grant it. Thus it is the intent and not the prevention of having children which is corrupt.

If you should say that the Prophet* said, “Whoever abandons marriage for fear of having dependents is not one of us in the least,” I would say that coitus interruptus is like abstinence from marriage. By “he is not one of us” is meant that he does not concur with our sunna and our Path: Our sunna is the pursuit of the more preferable deed. Should you point out the fact that the Prophet* said regarding coitus interruptus, “That constitutes a secret form of burying children alive” and [also] recited, “and when the girl-child that was buried alive is asked,” which is reported in the *Saḥīḥ [of Muslim], we would reply [that] in the *Saḥīḥ are also authentic reports concerning the lawfulness [of coitus interruptus]. His expression “secret form of burying children alive” is like unto his words “secret polytheism,” and that is an act which constitutes undesirability but not unlawfulness.

If you should point out the fact that Ibn ‘Abbās said, “Coitus interruptus constitutes the lesser degree of burying children alive, as conception is prevented (al-mannāf wafrudukhu bihi) by coitus interruptus (al-mu‘addad al-suhrāh).” then we would reply, “He is equating the prevention of existence to cutting it off, and that is a weak form of analogy.” For that reason ‘All* denounced this act upon hearing this saying, “A child is not buried alive until after the seventh, or seven phases have been completed,” and he recited the Koranic verse pertaining to the stages of creation [23:12-14]: “Verily We created man from a product of wet earth; then placed him as a drop (of seed) in a safe lodging,” up to “and then produced it as another creation.” that is to say, we breathed a spirit into him. Then he recited the Almighty’s words in [another] verse [81:8]: “And when the girl-child that was buried alive is asked.” If you examine what we have already stated concerning analogy and point of view, you will perceive the difference between the method of ‘All* and that of Ibn ‘Abbās* in seeking hidden meanings and pursuing knowledge.

It appears that the Saḥīḥayn [of Bukhārī and Muslim] concur in relating what Ibn Jābir had said, “We used to have coitus interruptus in the days of the Prophet while the Koran was being revealed.” In another transmittal: “We used to have coitus interruptus; the Prophet* heard about it, but he did not enquire of us against it.” There is also a report that Jābir had said: “A man came to the Prophet*, and said, ‘I have a bondwoman who is our servant and who brings us water [to drink] during the date-picking season. I do have intimate relations with her, but I am undesirous that she should conceive.’ He* replied, ‘Have coitus interruptus if you wish; for she shall receive what has been destined for her.’ The man was absent for some time, then he came back to him [the Prophet] and said, ‘The bondwoman is pregnant.’ He replied, ‘I told you that she will receive what has been destined for her.’ All this can be found in the *Saḥīḥayn [of Bukhārī and Muslim].

[Etiquette Concerning Having Children]

The eleventh: There are five points concerning the etiquette of having children.

(a) The first, that one should not be overjoyed with the birth of a male child, nor should he be excessively dejected over the birth of a female child, for he does not know in which of the two his blessings lie. Many a man who has a son wishes he did not have him, or wishes that he were a girl. The girls give more tranquility and [divine] remuneration, which are greater.

The Prophet* said, “If a man brings up his daughter well, nourishes her well, and shares with her the gifts which God has bestowed upon him, she will bring him fortune and will facilitate his passage from Hell to Heaven.” Ibn ‘Abbās related that the Messenger* of God said, "If a man has two daughters and treats them well as long as they remain with him, they will cause him to enter Paradise." Anas said in quoting the Messenger* of God, "If a man has two daughters or two sisters and he treats them well for as long as they remain with him, he and I will be in Paradise like these two [women]." Anas also related that the Messenger* of God declared, "If a man goes to one of the marketplaces of the Muslims, buys something, carries it back to his home, and gives it to the females and not to the males, God will look upon him [with favor], and whomever God looks upon [with favor] He will not torment." Anas also related that the Messenger* of God said, "When a man brings an extraordinary present [turābk] from the market to his family, it is like bringing them a charitable gift (ṣadāqa) which he places among them. Let him give the females before the males, for whoever brings joy to a female is like crying out of fear of God, and he who cries out of fear of God will be safeguarded by God from the Fire." Abū Hurayrah related that the Prophet* said, "Whoever has three daughters or sisters and tolerates their hardships and ordeals, God will bring him into Paradise for having shown mercy toward them." A man asked, "How about one?" And he said, "Even one."

(b) The second etiquette is that he should chant the prayer (ādān) in the ear of the offspring. Râfi' related the words of his father: "I saw the Prophet* chanting the ādān in the ear of al-Ḥasan [his grandson] when Fātihah* gave birth to him." It was related that the Prophet* said, "When a man has a child and chants the ādān in his right ear and the second call (qiyāma) in his left ear, he repels epilepsy (ṣama al-ṣibādūn) from him." It is desirable that the first words he is taught to speak when he learns to talk be "there is no God but Allah (la ilāha illa Allāh)" so that these words may constitute his first utterance. Circumcision on the seventh day is prescribed in a khabar.

(c) The third etiquette is that he should be given a good name, for that is the child's right. The Prophet* said, "Should you give a name, let the word 'abd (ja 'abbdū) be part of it." He* said, "The names most endearing to God are 'Abdullāh and 'Abd al-Rahmān." He also said, "Give them my name but not my surname (kunya)." The ulema said, "That was applicable to his* lifetime"; for he was surnamed 'Abd al-Qāsim. Now it is acceptable [to call children by the Prophet's surname]. True, a person should not be called by both the Prophet's name and his surname; for the Prophet said, "Do not give both my name and my surname together." It was said that this, too, was applicable to his lifetime. One person took the name Abū 'Īsā, so the Prophet* said, "'Īsā has no father," thus such a name is not desirable.

The miscarried fetus (al-sīgīt) must be given a name. 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Yazīd b. Mu'āwiyyah said, "I learned that the miscarried fetus will cry out after its father on the Day of Judgment saying, 'You have destroyed me and left me without a name.' Umār b. 'Abd al-Āzīz said, 'How so, when he might not know whether he is a male or a female?' 'Abd al-Rahmān replied, "There are names that might apply to both, like Ḥanuzhā, 'Amārah, Tālījah, and 'Utbah."

The Prophet* said, "You will be called on the Day of Judgment by your names and the names of your fathers; so let your names be good." Whoever has an undesirable name, it is preferable that it should be changed; the Messenger* of God changed the name al-Āṣ to 'Abdullāh. Zaynah's name was Barrah; the Prophet* said, "She purifies her soul," so he called her Zaynab. There has been an injunction against the use of the names Allāh (be lucky), Yasir (well-being), Nāfū' (useful), and Barakah (blessing) for the question is frequently asked, "Is Barakah there?" The answer would be "No."

(d) The fourth is a sacrifice (ṣajīq): for the male, two sheep; and for the female, one sheep. But one can be happy with one [sacrifice] be it for male or female. 'Aṭīshah recounted that the Messenger* of God ordered that in the case of a lad (ghulām), two complementary sheep should be sacrificed and in the case of a girl (jūriyah), one sheep. It has been related that one sheep was sacrificed. This makes it permissible to sacrifice only one. The Prophet* said, "For every male, there must be a sacrifice; therefore, shed blood on his behalf and thus remove harm from him."

It is part of the summa that the weight in gold or silver of the child's hair [cut on the seventh day] be offered to charity. There is a khabar to that effect, namely, that "the Prophet* ordered Fā-
God, "nor let them go forth in fornicity." [Kor. 65:1] saying: "If he does this against his family or inflicts on her a wrong deed or committed a grave act." This behavior during the prescribed order scores what we mean.

A husband, then she can be of a compensation (khalf) for that would constitute a trade that God said, "there is nothing for her freedom" that she has taken, or less, is the just reason, she is a sinner. Woman asks her husband to breathe the aura of Parmenides forbidden to her. In "Women who seek the knowledges," 136

Matters in divorce: one, state of menstrual purity with her. Divorce during purity in which they had coitus, unlawful innovation, as it does (iddah). 147 If he should do of 'Umar divorced his wife told 'Umar, "Command staid, menstruates, and is he choose either to divorce or among which God has ordained, it continued him to wait after tak- to states of purity, lest the divorce only.

Strict himself to one divorce 'tis at once because the one thing indicates the intent, he can benefit from retracting it should remorse develop during the period of waiting in which he can renew the marriage if he wishes after this period. If he pronounces all three divorce utterances [at once], he might regret it and be compelled to have a muhālī marry her and then wait awhile. To contract a muhālī is a denounced act for which the husband would be the cause; besides, his heart [under the circumstances] would be at the mercy of someone else’s wife [that is, the wife of the muhālī], and at the mercy of the divorce which he [the muhālī] grants. In addition, this would cause the wife to become disenchanted with him; all these are the fruits of al-jam‘ (uttering a threefold divorce). Uttering one divorce is sufficient in indicating the intent without danger. I do not mean to say that uttering a threefold divorce is unlawful; rather, it is undesirable for the aforementioned reasons, and by undesirability I mean disregard for himself.

The third, that he should be kind in offering a pretext to divorce her without stern censure and belittlement. He should soothe her heart by way of gratification with a present and cure the wounds inflicted by separation. Almighty God has said, “yet make provision for them” [Kor. 2:236 (Arberry, vol. 1:62)]; and this is a duty whenever it is the case that a dowry had not been specified in the original marriage [contract].

Al-Hasan b. ‘Ali was an unbridled divorcer and marrier. One day he sent one of his companions to divorce two women among his wives and said, “Tell them to prepare for the legal period of waiting.” He ordered him to give each one of them 10,000 dirhams. He did; and when he [the companion] returned to him, he [al-Hasan] asked him, “What did they do?” he replied, “One of them lowered her head and thus remained, but the other cried and wailed and I heard her say, ‘These are very small provisions from a parting loved one.’” Al-Hasan bowed his head and invoked blessings on her saying, “Were I to take back a woman after separating from her, I would take her back.”

One day al-Hasan went to see ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Hārith b. Hishām, who was the faqīh (jurist) of Medina and its chief, who had no equal in Medina, and whom ‘Āishah used as an example when she said, “Had I not already traversed this course of mine,” I would have preferred to have sixteen males from the Messenger* of God like ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Hārith b. Hishām.” Al-Hasan went to see ‘Abd al-Rahmān in his house. [‘Abd al-Rahmān] honored him and told him to sit in his place saying, “Would that you had sent for me; I would have come to you.” Al-Hasan replied, “The need is ours.” He [‘Abd al-Rahmān] asked, “What is it?” He told him, “I have come seeking your daughter in marriage.” ‘Abd al-Rahmān lowered his head, then raised it and said, “By God, there is no one walking upon this earth who is dearer to me than you; but you know that my daughter is flesh of my flesh: what offends her offends me, and what pleases her, pleases me. You are an unbridled divorcer: I fear that you would divorce her. Should you do that, I fear also that my heart would turn away from loving you, and I would be unhappy should my heart be turned away from you, because you are a part of the Messenger’s flesh. If you promise not to divorce her, I will give her to you in marriage.” Al-Hasan was silent, then he arose and left. One of his household heard him saying while walking, “‘Abd al-Rahmān wanted to make his daughter a rope around my neck.”

‘Ali* used to be impatient with his [al-Hasan’s] numerous divorces and would apologize on his behalf from the pulpit saying in his sermon (khutbah), “Hasan is very prone to divorce, so do not give him [your daughters] in marriage.” A man from Hamadān rose and said, “O prince of the faithful, we will give him our daughters in marriage to his heart’s satisfaction. If he so wishes he can keep them, and if he so desires he can let them go.” That pleased ‘Ali and he said, “Were I a gatekeeper of Paradise, I would tell Hamadān to enter in peace.” This is merely an indication that if a man, out of embarrassment, speaks ill of someone dear to him, whether wife or child, it is not necessary that one should agree with him since such an agreement would be undesirable. Rather, it is a rule of etiquette to disagree to the best of one’s ability, for that is more pleasing to his heart and in accord with his hidden thought.

The aim of all of this is to show that divorce is permissible. God has promised riches in both separation and in marriage saying, “And marry such of you as are solitary and the pious of your slaves and maidservants. If they be poor, Allah will enrich them of His bounty” [Kor. 24:32]; and also saying, “But if they separate, Allah will compensate each out of His abundance” [4:130].

The fourth, that he should never reveal her secret [private affairs] while divorced or married. Concerning the revealing of women’s secrets, an authentic khabar transmits great threat. It is related that a virtuous man wanted to divorce his wife and he was asked, “What grievance have you against her?” And he replied, “A wise man does not reveal the secrets of his wife.” After divorcing her he was asked, “Why did you divorce her?” And he replied “The affairs of someone else’s wife are not my concern.” This indicates the husband’s obligation.

SECOND PART OF THIS CHAPTER

Examination of the Husband’s Rights

The authoritative statement in this context is that marriage constitutes a form of enslavement; thus she is his slave, and she should obey the husband absolutely in everything he demands of her provided such demands do not constitute an act of disobedience. There are many akhbaar that magnify the rights of the husband.

The Prophet* said, “If a woman dies while her husband is satisfied with her, she will enter Paradise.” A man went on a journey and enjoined his wife against descending from the high ground [where they lived] to the low ground where her father lived. He became ill, so the wife sent for the Messenger* of God, asking permission to descend to her father. The Prophet* replied, “Obey your husband.” Her father died, and again she sought his [the Prophet’s] counsel and he said, “Obey your husband.” When her father was buried, the Messenger* of God sent word to her that God has forgiven her father by virtue of her obedience to her husband. The Prophet* said, “If a woman performs her five [daily] prayers, fasts during the month [of Ramadan], preserves her chastity, and obeys her husband, she will enter the Paradise of her Lord.” He included obedience to the husband in the basic principles of Islam. The Messenger* of God described women as: “Child-bearers, mothers, nurses who are compassionate toward their children, and those who pray will enter Paradise, provided that they do not commit wrongs against their husbands.” The Prophet* said, “I looked into Hell and found most of the occupant to be women,” and we asked him, “Why, O Messenger* of God?” He replied, “Because they curse a lot and enrage their masters,” by this he meant the husband with whom they consort. In another khabar [the Prophet said], “I looked into Paradise and the majority of its inhabitants were women. So I asked, ‘Where are the women?’ And I was told, ‘They are preoccupied with two red things: gold, and saffron,’” meaning jewelry and dyestuff for clothes.

According to ‘A‘ishah*: “A young girl came to the Prophet* and said, ‘O Messenger of God, I am a betrothed girl but I detest marriage. What are the husband’s rights from the woman?’ He replied, ‘Were he covered with pus from the tip of his head to the soles of his feet, and were she to lick him, she would not compensate him enough.’ Whereupon she said, ‘Should I then not get married?’ He said, ‘Do, for it is good.’”

Ibn ‘Abbas said, “A woman from Khath‘am came to the Messenger* of God and said, ‘I have no husband and I wish to get married: What is the husband’s right?’ and he said, ‘The rights of the husband incumbent upon a wife are that if he should desire her and seek to have her while she is on the back of a camel, she should not deny him his wish. It is his right that she should not give [away] anything from his household except with his permission; should she do this, the burden is hers and the compensation is his. It is also his right that she should not observe a voluntary fast except with his permission; should she do it, she will suffer hunger and thirst and her fasting will not be acceptable [to God]. If she leaves her house without his permission, the angels will curse her until she returns to his house or repents.’” The Prophet* said, “Were I to command someone to prostrate himself before another, I would command the wife to prostrate herself before her husband on account of the magnitude of her obligation to him.” The Prophet* also said, “A woman is nearest to the face of God when she is in the inner sanctum of her house; performing the prayer in the courtyard of her house is better than praying in the mosque, and praying in her house is better than praying in her courtyard, and praying in her bedchamber (makhdura) is better than praying elsewhere in her house.”¹⁴³ The alcove is a quarter within the house; it is a place of shielding. For that reason the Prophet* said, “A woman is deficient; if she goes out, she will please the devil.”¹⁴⁴ He also said, “A woman has ten deficient qualities; if she marries, the husband covers one of those qualities, and if she dies, the grave covers all ten.”¹⁴⁵

[EXPOSITION OF THE RIGHTS OF THE HUSBAND]

Thus the husband’s rights toward the wife are many, but most important are two: the first is safeguarding and sheltering; the other is to be spared unnecessary demands and the need for having to provide them if they are unlawful. This was the custom of women with the forefathers. When a man went out of his home, his wife or daughter would say to him, “Beware of unlawful gain; we would endure hunger and harm rather than Fire [hellfire].” One of the predecessors was about to go on a journey of which his neighbors disapproved. They said to his wife, “Why do you let him go when he has not left you any provisions?” She said, “Since the day I knew my husband, he has been a consumer and not a provider; but I do have a Lord who provides. The consumer goes, but the Provider remains.”

Rabi‘ah [of Syria], the daughter of Isma‘il, asked Ahmad b. Abū al-Ḥawwārī¹⁴⁶ to marry her. He declined because he was preoccupied with worship and said to her, “My preoccupations are not inclined toward women, because I am too preoccupied with myself.” She replied, “I am more preoccupied with myself than you are, and I have no [physical] desire. However, I have inherited much wealth from my husband and I wish you would spend it on your spiritual brothers, and that through you I should come to know the righteous ones, thus finding a path to God, may He be glorified and honored.” He replied, “Wait until I seek permission of my master.” So he returned to find Abū Sulaymān al-Dārānī, who used to enjoin against his getting married and [who had] said, “None of our companions ever got married without being changed.” But when he heard her words, he said, “Marry her, for she is a friend of God. Hers are the words of the righteous.” Al-Ḥawwārī said, “I married her; and there was in our house a container made of plaster which had become worn out through use by those who hastily washed their hands and left after meals, not to mention those who had washed with potash.” He also said, “I married three wives in addition, but she used to give me the best to eat and used to perfume me. She would say to me, ‘Go with energy and strength to your wives.’” Thus Rabi‘ah of Syria was likened unto Rabi‘ah al-‘Adwiyah of Basra.¹⁴⁷

Among the obligations of the woman is that she should not squander his [her husband’s] possessions, but rather take great care of them. The Messenger* of God said, “It is not lawful for her to feed anyone from his house without his permission, except from food that would spoil if kept. Should she feed [others] with his blessing, then she would earn the same kind of reward he earns; but if she should feed [them] without his permission, then he would earn the reward and she would bear the burden.”¹⁴⁸

It is the obligation of the parents to train her in the etiquette of cohabitation with her husband. It is related of Asma’, the daughter of Khārijah al-Fazzārī, that she said to her daughter when the latter got married, “You have left a nest in which you grew up and proceeded to a bed which you know not and a mate with whom you have not associated; be an earth for him, and he will be your sky; be a resting place for him, and he will be your pillar; be his bondmaid, and he will be your slave; do not make excessive demands, for he will then desert you; do not become too distant from him, for he will then forget you; should he draw near, then draw close to him; should he become distant, stay away from him. Shield his nose, his hearing and his eye¹⁴⁹ so he will smell nothing from you but that which is sweet, hear nothing but that which is good, and look at nothing but that which is beautiful.”

A man said to his wife [in rhyme]:

Seek forgiveness from me, and you will earn my constant affection;
Speak not when I am angry;
Do not beat me once as you would beat
BOOK ON ETIQUETTE OF MARRIAGE

The tambourine, for you do not know what the unknown may hold in store; Do not complain excessively, for it will cause love to depart and turn my heart away from you; I have seen love in the heart and harm; if the two should meet, love would soon disappear.

[ETIQUETTE FOR THE WOMAN]

Without going into lengthy details, a summary of what constitutes etiquette for the woman is the following: She should remain in the inner sanctum of her house and tend to her spinning; she should not enter and exit excessively; she should speak infrequently with her neighbors and visit them only when the situation requires it; she should safeguard her husband's absence and in his presence: she should seek his pleasure in all affairs and refrain from betraying him through herself or his possessions; she should not leave his home without his permission; if she goes out with his permission, she should conceal herself in worn-out clothes and choose the less-frequented places rather than the main avenues and market places, being careful that no stranger hear her voice or recognize her personally; she should not approach friends of her husband while going about her business, but feign ignorance of those who might recognize her or whom she might recognize; her primary concern should be caring for her own affairs, tending to her house, performing her prayers, and fasting; should a friend of her husband knock at the door when he [the husband] is not present, she should not ask questions or engage in conversation, so as to maintain her self-respect and her husband's; she should be content with the means that God has provided her husband; she should place his rights before hers and before the rights of his relatives; she should always observe the rules of personal hygiene, and be ready at all times for him to enjoy her whenever he wishes; she should be affectionate toward her children, zealous to protect them, refraining from uttering profane words against them and from talking back to her husband.

The Prophet said, "I and a haggard woman like these two will be in Paradise: a widowed woman who dedicated herself to her daughters until they attained the age of puberty, or [one who has] died." The Prophet also said, "God has forbidden all the descendants of Adam to enter Paradise before me; but I look and behold on my right a woman [who] has preceded me to the gate of Paradise; so I ask, 'Why does she precede me?' And the answer comes, 'O Muhammad, this was a fine, beautiful woman who had orphans. She was patient until they attained their present state, so God was pleased with her for that.'"

Other etiquettes governing the woman include the following: that she should not boast to her husband of her beauty, neither should she belittle her husband for his ugliness. It was related that al-Asma'i said, "I went to the desert and, behold, I saw a woman with a most beautiful face married to a man with the ugliest [face]; so I said to her, 'Woman, are you satisfied to be married to such a man?' She said, 'Be quiet! You have uttered ill words; perhaps he has earned high merits with His Lord and thus I became his reward; or perhaps I have offended my Creator and he thus became my punishment. Should I not then accept what God has seen fit for me?' Thus did she silence me."

Al-Asma'i also related, "I saw a woman in the desert who was wearing a red garment and carrying a rosary; so I said to her, 'What a discrepancy between the two!' She replied [in rhyme]: 'Part of me belongs to God and I shall not squander it; the other part belongs to folly and idleness.' I learned that she was a virtuous woman who had a husband for whom she adorns herself."

Another decorum of the woman is to be virtuous, and melancholy in the absence of her husband, and to return to her sprightliness and happiness in his presence. She should never harm her husband in any way. Mu'adhd b. Jabal related: "The Messenger of God said, 'Whenever a woman hurts her husband in this world, his houri wife says: 'Do not harm him, may God reprove you! For he is a stranger in your house who will soon depart from you to join us.'"

Her marital obligations include: that she should not mourn over the death of the husband longer than four months and ten days during which time she should avoid perfume and adornment. Zaynab, the daughter of Abi Salamah, said: 'I went to visit Umm Habiba, the wife of the Prophet, when her father Abü...
Sufyān b. Harb died. She asked for perfume containing a yellow tinge (khalīq) or something like it. She anointed a female slave with it, then touched both cheeks and said, “By God, I have no need for perfume; however, I did hear the Messenger* of God say, “It is not lawful for a woman who believes in God and the Day of Judgment to mourn more than three days over the dead unless he be a husband, in which case she should mourn for four months and ten days.”

The woman should remain in the house of her marriage until the end of the legally prescribed waiting period, and must not move to her family or leave the house except out of necessity.

Another etiquette is that she should perform every service of which she is capable at home. It was related that Asmā‘, the daughter of Abū Bakr al-Siddiq,* said: “Zubayr” married me when he had on earth neither possessions nor slaves nor anything besides his horse and a [water-carrying] camel (nāfīḥa). I used to feed his horse, give him his provisions, look after him, grind date-stones for his camel, feed him, bring water, string beads to hang on his neck, and knead dough. I used to transport ground date-stones on my head a distance of more than two-thirds of a parasang* until Abū Bakr sent me a slave girl, and I was then contented with looking after the horse. It was like being freed. The Messenger* of God came upon me one day with his companions while I was carrying date-stones on my head, and he* said “Akh, akh” to make his she-camel kneel so as to carry me behind him. I was embarrassed to proceed with men and remembered the jealousy of al-Zubayr; for indeed he was the most jealous of men. The Messenger* of God noticed that I was embarrassed; so I came to al-Zubayr and told him what had happened. He said, “By God, it is more painful for me to see you carry ground date-stones on your head than to ride with him.”

The Book of Marriage ends here with praise and thanks to God. May His blessings be upon every pure servant.

---

APPENDIX A

Chronological List of al-Ghazālī’s Works

The chronological list of al-Ghazālī’s works was derived from a number of bibliographic sources, particularly George F. Hourani’s “The Chronology of Ghazālī’s Writings” and Caesar E. Farah’s manuscript, “A Bibliographical Guide to Islamic Philosophy and Mysticism,” which is now being published by Luzac & Co. For a comprehensive study of all of al-Ghazālī’s works, where the manuscripts may be found, translations in various languages, reprints in Arabic, and spurious works attributed to him, see ‘Abd al-Rahmān Badrāwī, Mu‘tāsīf al-Ghazālī. The following list does not include the indeterminable or spurious works. If the student is interested in books attributed to al-Ghazālī, other sources should be consulted.

   A concise work on law, written during the lifetime of his teacher, Imām al-Haramayn al-Juwayni, before 478/1085–86.
   The first known manuscript was written in 573/1177 in Egypt. The book, apparently lost, treats questions of fiqh in detail.
3. “Ma‘shūd al-Khālid” (Point of Departure in Disputation)
   On methods of legal debate. Apparently lost.
4. “Lubāb al-Nāzir” (The Essence of Reflection)
On methods of legal debate, or ways of investigation and disputation. No reference to its availability.

7. "Khulṣāyat al-Mukhtāsr" (The Essence of the Abridged) Written in 598/1202, it is a resumé of the "Mukhtāsr" of Imsā'il al-Mazāni, who was an early Shāf'īi lawyer (died 877 A.H.). It is the smallest book on selection from jurisprudence (fiqh). Apparently lost.

8. "Al-ṣawḥ" (The Simple Work) In manuscript form, it is an early work on fiqh, summarizing Imsā'il al-Haramayn's "Nihāyat al-maṭla'." The date of the earliest manuscript was placed at 436/1238.

9. "Al-Ṣawḥ" (The Middle Work) In manuscript, it is a work on fiqh of Ghazālī's earlier life and a summary of "Al-Bāṣrī.

(b) Edited by M. S. Kardif, 3 parts. Cairo: n.p., 1355/1936.
(c) German text by George Beer. Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1888. The book was possibly written as a background to the Tahāfūt around 484/1091-92.

(b) Texte arabe établi et accompagné d'un sommaire latin, by M. Bouyges in Bibliotheca Arabic Aistoricalis II. Beirut: Imprimerie Catholique, 1972.
(c) New edition of Bouyges by Majid Fakhry. Beirut: n.p., 1962. A treatise in defense of Muhammad orthodoxy and on logic, written about 487/1094, according to Hourani, Ghazālī stated he "spends 'nearly a year' in critical reflection on philosophy, afterward no less than two more years spent in understanding it."

The book is a searching theological critique of Batūnism or the Nūr al-'Imārāt and deals with the holding of office by the ʻAbbasid caliph al-Mustāṣfīr, establishing his legitimacy against the opposition of the Bāṭinīyah sect, and also deals with the Fatimid caliph al-Mustāṣfīr. Rosenthal states that al-Mustāṣfīr is "generously tempered with political realism and preparedness to make concessions to expediency."

15. "Ḥujjat al-Hāqq" (Proof of Truth) A reply to criticisms made by the Ta disple to Ghaṣālī in Baghdad. Apparently lost.

16. Mīṣrī al-Ḥūthī al-Mansūr (The Measure of Knowledge in the Art of Logic) Edited by M. S. Kardif without the word "Fann." Cairo: n.p., 1329/1911. A possible appendix to the Tahāfūt as it explains the technical terms in that work. It is a book on Aristotelian logic.

(b) Edited by M. Qabānī. Cairo: Adilīyā Press, n.d.; reprinted with the same pagination by Tābilīyā Press. Written about 487/1094-95, it is a "constructive" work on dogmas as opposed to Qawā'id al-Afaqī, which is "destructive," as stated by al-Ghaṣālī; a proaic piece of kalām which he wrote as a Sufi. It is his "chief work of dogmatism."

(b) 2d ed. Cairo: 'Arabīyah Press, 1542/1923.
(c) Translated by Hükmāt ūrād. Crise de l'action. Preface by L. Massignon. Paris: Librairie orientale et americaine, 1945. A companion to the Mīṣrī, the Mīṣrī gives criteria for sound action. Practice (ṣālīk) and knowledge (ʿilm) are required for happiness in this world and the next. This was written about 488/1095.

20. "Al-Ra'dāh al-Qudāṭīyāh" (Jerusalem Treatise) Possibly written around 489/1096, it is an epistle addressed to the people of Jerusalem and subsequently incorporated into the Ḥujjā by under the rubric Qawā'id al-Afaqī (The Foundations of the Articles of Faith).

(b) Translated into German with commentary by F. E. Willms. Al-Ghaṣālī's Schriften unter der Göttlichen Jens, 1966. A polemic against Christian theology, written about 492/1099.

22. Ḥujjā "Aṣālīn al-Dīn (The Revival of the Religious Sciences) (a) Numerous editions in Arabic. The one used here was 'Iraqī's four
A collection of pious exhortations leading to salvation, compiled in Persian for the novice.

Watt states that this book deals essentially with symbolism, revelation and the interpretation of miracles, and the idea that “God is bātin (esoteric) because He is so extremely zāhir (exoteric).” It is an exposition of Ghazālī’s own views.

30. Al-Maqāsid al-Aqāfi fī mu'ādāt 'Allāh al-Hamad (The Farthest Aim in the Meanings of God’s Beautiful Names)

(b) In a recent edition, the title has been “al-‘Asnā” rather than “al-Aqā” Beirut: Dār al-Mashriq, 1971.

An exposition of divine names.

31. Molkāt al-‘Amsār (The Niche for Lights)

(a) Cairo: n.p., 1933/1934.

This book contains his developed mystical doctrines and further theological and anti-Bāṭinī essays.

Hourani and Badawi indicated in their listings that it was apparently lost. However, Farah states that there appears to be a translation by Ates. It was mentioned that it referred to Tanūsm and presumably was listed as “Mawālim al-Bāṭīnīyah” in the Taḥqīqī of Subki.

33. Jawāb Muḥyī Allāh al-Khulīf (Answering Details of Disputation) The Munahh describes it, according to Hourani, as a reply to criticisms made against Ghazālī in Hamadān, and a refutation of the Tālimīs. Hourani further asserts that “it is not known whether or when Ghazālī was in Hamadān.” Apparently lost.

34. Jawāh al-Qur'ān (Jewels from the Koran) Cairo: Rabīnāniyāh Press, 1352/1933

Bouyges states that al-Ghazālī discloses in this book the Essence, the Attributes, the Acts (of God), and the Return (to God). It is a collection of selected verses.

It is a short summary of the ‘Iḥād

(a) Cairo: n.p., 1933/1934.

The book justifies the use of Aristotelian logic in religious matters; a treatise on ethics.

38. "Kitāb al-Dārî" (Book of Recording) As mentioned in Munqidh, this book is an answer to 'Feeble' criticisms by the Tarlimis against Ghaṣālī in Tūs. Apparently lost.

41. Al-Muttaṣa'f muh-Tâm al-Uṣlî (The Condensation of the Science of Fundamentals) 2 vols. Cairo: Tājîriyyâ Press, 1356/1937. A treatise on jurisprudence, it embodies also a part of his lectures from three years of teaching at the Nîṣâmîyah. It was written possibly around 499/1106.

APPENDIX B

Glossary of Selected Arabic Terms

This glossary encompasses only terms used herein that have acquired a technical usage. It mirrors existing standardized definitions as well as adjustments introduced in this work. The terms regarding hadith are used as employed by Guillaume, The Traditions of Islam. Other major helpful sources have been Farah, Islam: Beliefs and Observances; Schacht, An Introduction to Islamic Law; Ibn al-Nadim, The Fihrist of al-Nadim; Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon; and Jabre, Essai sur le lexique de Ghazali.

‘abd Servant of God or slave; used in proper names in combination with Allah Ahl al-Kitāb People of the Book; in the Koran (5:68–69) the name is used for Christians, Jews, and Sabaeans akhbār (sing. khabar) News, reports; the term is applied to traditions traced back, not to the Prophet, but to other authorities such as his companions, well-known jurists, and imams
alim See ulema
‘anāt Forgication or committing a sin
‘aqīd Marriage contract; formalization of the marriage vows
‘aqīqah Sacrifice; a sheep or goat slaughtered as a sacrifice on the seventh day after the birth of a child
‘aqēf To cast or draw lots, or practice sortelege among women
‘Askār Name of a voluntary fast day, the tenth day of Muharram ‘asr Period of sunset, time of one of the ritual prayers āḍhār (sing.  athkar) Traces; applied to traditions relating the deeds and utterances of Muhammad and his companions baqā’ Subsistence in God; an ultimate Sufi state bāṭin Internal, hidden or inner meaning; esoteric darif Not fulfilling the required conditions for transmittal dhikr Remembrance or recollection of God; an exercise by Sufis to induce ecstasy fand Annihilation, or passing away of oneself in God; the mystical union of the soul with God faqīh Islamic jurist or jurisprudent fardgh Emptying or purifying the heart; a Sufi tenet fard Canonically imposed duty or obligation of faith fāqih The corpus of Islamic jurisprudence fātihah Natural disposition of the heart to know God gharib Authentic, but resting on the authority of only one companion ghuḍūf Major or full ablution ceremony involving the entire body; see also wud’ū’ hadith Traditions of the Prophet; collection of sayings and precedents of the Prophet, handed down by his associates and followers hajj A canonically prescribed pilgrimage to Mecca haram Canonically forbidden; a sin hasan Of fair authority, with a slight fault; approved form of transmittal hasan gharib Authentic, of fair authority hasan sahih Genuine, of fair authority hayd Menstruation; important in connection with determining the time of conception and responsibility for fatherhood, as well as significant for ritual purification hikmah Exercise of judicial authority, a rule, a decree; an edict or a prescript hurūd Tith; intercourse for the purpose of having offspring husāl Ecstasy; union with God through mystical practices
iḥdāl Substitution (when certain righteous people die, God substitutes others for them) ‘iddah Legally prescribed waiting period of a woman before remarriage
‘iddat bayyinah Legally prescribed waiting period for final divorce; woman cannot remarry her husband ‘iddat al-rayyah Legally prescribed waiting period pending remarriage with one’s divorced wife iṣṭiḥār Cloaking oneself over the left shoulder during the pilgrimage to Mecca ijma’ Consensus; interpretation of the law according to the opinions of the leading jurists ‘īla’ Defects, causes imam Used here for leading religious personalities; it also has a number of other significations ṣadah Call to prayer repeated at the beginning of the prayer ritual irādah Desire; the aspiration to do only God’s will; in a Sufi context, a willful determination to undertake the rigors of the Path ‘ishā’ Evening meal and time of the fourth ritual prayer inzad Literally means “leaning upon”; the chain of authority which precedes and introduces the text of hadith ṣar Seamless white cloth wrapped around loins to knee level by the pilgrim performing the hajj jama’ Uttering a threefold divorce juyud Good, reliable form of transmittal jihad Striving on behalf of the faith; Holy War of the Muslims against the infidels junub Major ritual impurity; signifies a man under obligation of performing a total ablation, by reason of sexual intercourse and discharge of the semen Kaba The shrine at Mecca sacred to the Muslims kaḍāḥah Abomination or reprehensible kasa To earn; Koranic usage connotes the performance of an act for which one merits reward or punishment on the Day of Judgment khāber See akhāber
khuf Divorce requested by the wife, who must pay a compensation (khufah) khuṭbah An exhortation or admonition recited, generally in rhyming prose, during the noon service of the mosque on Friday by an orator (khutbā) kitābīyah  See Ahl al-Kitāb īfrīn Oath of condemnation; in Islamic Law, can also be a sworn allegation of adultery committed by either husband or wife madīd Return journey; the ultimate state of existence in the world to come madhab (plur. madhāhib) Juridical rite to which a Sunni Muslim may adhere magrib Sunset; time of one of the ritual prayers mahār A dowry or a nuptial gift given to the bride in a contract of marriage
mākārā A reprehensible or an evil act, but not a forbidden one manāsir (plur. manāsīl) Stages; a Sufi tenet maqāmāt (sing. maqām) The stations of the faith; a Sufi tenet maqārif Knowledge, learning; the knowledge of Allah, the experience of ecstasy, and the gnosis of the mystics marābah A Sufi rank or station marāfīf Weak tradition, yet known because it is confirmed by another masʿūdah al-masʿīdat al-najḥāh Coitus interruptus; significance similar to that of burying a girl child alive Mardaj Muhammad’s nocturnal journey to the Seventh Heaven mubah Permissible; a deed neither recommended nor prohibited mubhān Obscure; a tradition derived from a person about whom nothing is known save his name muftī The legal authority in Islam who gives expert decisions by which the courts are guided muḥāfīfī A man who marries a divorced (three pronouncements of formula) woman on condition that he divorce her after consummation of the marriage so she may lawfully remarry her former husband
mukhāṣfah Women who incite, urge, or induce their husbands to divorce them for a gift or a compensation (khutah) without any injurious conduct from the latter mukhtārif A tradition which apparently contradicts another, but which can be reconciled to it munkar A tradition of weak authority contradicted by a weaker one munqāf An isnād from which a name has disappeared murūd A novice, a disciple of a marshid (teacher of a Sufi order) mursal A text without isnād, or one with an incomplete isnād mursū’ah Manliness; a pre-Islamic Arab concept which comprises all knightly virtues and the ideal of manhood murnād Authorities by whom a hadith is passed down musār The contracting of temporary marriage; legalized by the Shi’i law
mutaṣaf ʿulayhi A tradition that is agreed upon and received by Bukhārī and Muslim mutassil A tradition with an uninterrupted isnād nāfaq In Islamic Law, it signifies adequate support for a wife or expenditure
nafs Self, soul, ego
nagib A surety for the people, leader nāṣkh Abrogating; refers to the chain of authority and is used by Muslim theologians in reference to a verse or sentence of the Koran which cancels or abrogates a previous one qibla The south, or the direction to be faced in prayer raʾāh Bow, prostration; a bending of the torso from an upright position, followed by two prostrations with each standing for a full prayer cycle
ramāl Trotting while performing the circuit around the Kaaba Raʾiszāq Provider; one of the ninety-nine attributes of God sadāqah Voluntary, nonstatutory alms rendered for the sake of acquiring merit with God; in Islamic Law, legally prescribed alms tax (sadaq) sabbah Transmittal made genuine sahīh Genuine; fulfilling all conditions Shārīʿa The Muslim law derived from the Koran, the hadith, and the processes of jurisprudence shirk Polytheism; associating other deities or “partners” with Allah
shukr Thankfulness; it is one of the stations of the mystic sūfī Miscarried fetus sunnah (plur. sunān) The theory and practice of conventional Muslims, based on the Koran and the hadith taʿbiyyah idhāriyyah Divine fulfillment tahlīl Exaltation (of God)
tashīr To glorify, praise, to exclaim “allahu akhbar” ṭalās Divorce; three “I divorce thee” utterances either at separate intervals or at one time for finalization tawbah Repentance; the first station on the Sufi path ṭayyib A woman who is deflowered or married; a divorcée or a widow ṭiqā A trustworthy transmittal ṭuhr The days of a woman’s state of purity from the menstrual discharge ulema (sing. alim) Scholars who are knowledgeable in Islamic beliefs and dogmas ‘umrah Lesser pilgrimage to Mecca uslīl (sing. aṣl) Ascendants, fundamentals; also meaning roots, origins, principles ʿuttul One who has a harsh tongue and who is cruel toward his family wahy Revelation
waḥī Legal guardian; also refers to the believer as “friend of God” waṭr A form of prayer, in which an odd number of prostrations is performed, after the night prayer waṣfa’ Limited ablation for or preparatory to prayer; see also ghusal zindiq Freethinker; in the ninth and tenth centuries, the term was applied as a rule to the partisans of Zoroastrians and Manichaeans who were feared as rebels zuḥd Asceticism; a way of life which included renunciation of worldly things, fasting, prayer, studying the Koran, and similar religious observances and practices
zuhr Noon; time for the third daily prayer incumbent upon Muslims

Notes

As in the text, all references to the Koran are from Pickthall’s
The Glorious Koran unless otherwise noted.

PREFACE

PART I. INTRODUCTION

1. al-Ghazali, Confessions, 10.
2. I use the spelling “al-Ghazali” throughout this study, but I have not changed alternative spellings quoted from other works. For standard bibliographical accounts see al-Ghazali, Faith and Practice, Jabra, Le Léoni de Ghazali; and Badawi, Mu‘allafat al-Ghazali.
3. al-Ghazali, Counsel for Kings, xxxiii.
4. Nawab ‘Ali, Moral and Religious Teachings, vili. The word Ḥujjat, an honorific title, may also be translated “argument for,” or “demonstration of.”
6. Life and Works of Ḥāṭphalt. 258. His full name was Abū ‘Uthmān ‘Amr b. Bahir al-Khulaini al-Fuqaha al-Baṣrī. a leading esoteric writer of Islam. He was born in Basra and lived from 255/767 to 253/868-89. He was of African origin and his ancestors were slaves. “Al-Ḥāṭphalt” is a nickname given to him because of his protruding eyes and physical grotesqueness.
7. Fazyee, Muhammadan Law, 111.
8. This period is three months from the date of the declaration of divorce or, if the woman is pregnant, until delivery (see Fazyee, Muhammadan Law, 114–50; Kor. 2:229, 231–32, 234–35; Kor. 35:49; Kor. 65:46-47).
9. Shukri, Law of Marriage and Divorce, 21
11. The legal and social implications are extremely important since this entitlement changed the woman from an object of sale to an individual human being; she became a legal person capable of entering into a contractual
3. Akhār (sing. ḥaḥār, literally "news, report") is applied to traditions traced back, not to the Prophet, but to other authorities such as his companions, well-known jurists, imams, etc.

4. Ṭahr (sing. ṭāhr, literally "trace") is applied to traditions relating the deeds and utterances of Muhammad and his companions.

5. Watt states that this injunction is "usually taken to mean that the relatives should not oppose remarriage to the former husband, but might refer to opposition by the former husband to another husband" (Companion to the Qurʾān, 42).

6. Hereafter, invocations after saints, prophets, companions and those who have passed away will be deleted; an asterisk will indicate the deletions. The invocation after a saint or a prophet is, "May the prayer and peace of God be upon him"; after companions, "God be satisfied with him"; and others, "May God have mercy upon him."

7. See discussion in note 110, this chapter. Actually, "whoever likes my religion which I practice."

8. This hadith was related by Abū Yaʿlā in his Masnad with an introduction and conclusion from the hadith of Ibn 'Abdāb on the authority of Ḥasan Ibn Ṭalhā (Ṭirāqī).

9. This hadith was related by Abū Bakr Ibn Murdawayh in his commentary from the hadith of Ibn 'Umair without his including "even if you should fall." His transmission is weak, and this addition was also mentioned by al-Bayhaqī through his knowledge of al-Shāhīfī who claimed had informed him of it (Ṭirāqī).

10. First part conforms with the hadith of Anas: "Whoever refrains from my sunna, he is not of me"; and the rest was preceded by hadith (Ṭirāqī). See also 'Abd al-Baqī, Luṭ' u wa al-Maṣānīd, 3:100.

11. Abā Maṣūqī al-Daylāmī related this hadith in his Masnad al-Firdaws from Abū Saʿīd's hadith in a weak transmission and in the Masnad of al-Dārimī and in the Majām al-Baghawi and in the Mustāfī as related from the sayings of Abū Najīh, "whoever is able to marry and does not marry, he is not of us," and Abū Najīh dissented in his friendship (Ṭirāqī).

12. Ibn Mājah related this hadith from the hadith of 'Aḥishah in a weak (da'īf) transmission (Ṭirāqī).

13. Reference is to lustfulness.

14. This hadith is agreed upon by the sayings taken from the hadith of Ibn Maṣrūf (Ṭirāqī). See also 'Abd al-Baqī, Luṭ' u wa al-Maṣānīd, 3:99; and al-Bukhārī, Sahih, 7:3. The term used here, ʿṣal, literally means "bruising of the veins of the testicles until they break, so that it is like gelding" (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 295).

15. Arousal of senesous desire through eyeing the opposite sex.

17. al-Tirmidī made this transmitted known from the hadith of Abū Hurayrah (Ṭirāqī).

18. In Sufi lexicography, the term is also used to signify sainthood or "friendship of God" (Jabir, Le Langage de Ghandah, 278).

19. Ahmad related this hadith in a weak transmission from the hadith of Muṣṭāfī Anas (Ṭirāqī).

20. Ibn al-Jawzī related this hadith in the 'Iqlīm from the hadith of Anas in a weak transmission (Ṭirāqī).

21. Implies desire for sex. According to Ibn Maṣūqī the term applies to sexual organs of both male and female (Lisan al-Arabi, 3:166). Hans Wehr mentions only "vulva" under farj (Dictionary, 702).

22. Implies desire for food.

23. Young and the "hadih" from Abū Hurayrah (Iraqi).

24. 'Umar b. al-Khattāb, second caliph, is one of the greatest figures of early Islam and founder of the Arab empire. The West has given him the epithet of "St. Paul of Islam." He is also referred to as umr al-mu'minin, in a sense renewing the theocratic regime of the time of the Prophet; it ceased with 'Umar, but the transmission of prophetic powers was revived later by the Shi'a. He was the father-in-law of the Prophet, who married his daughter, Hafṣah. He died 23/644 (Encyclopedia of Islam, supplement, new ed., s.v. "Abū Huṣayn").

25. Fqīh also means to act immorally, sin, live licitously, lead a dissolute life, indulge in debauchery (Wehr, Dictionary, 697).

27. Farīqūh, emptying the heart, is a Sufi tenet. It means that by ridding himself of selfish desires, man is able to receive God's graces and become tranquil (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 2382).

28. Abū 'Abd Allāh b. 'Abd Allāh b. 'Abd Allāh b. Qays, a slave of berber origin attached to the governor of al-Bahrayn, became an authority on the Koran and hadith. He died in 107/782–726 (Ibn al-Nadim, Fihrist, 75, 82, 1012).

30. Ibn Ṭabārī, who died in 52–53/653–54, was a companion of the Prophet and was one of the first converts. He is a traditionist and an authority on the Koran and the sunna. To him is attributed 484 traditions, which are collected in Munad Ahmad (Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed., s.v. "al-Mas'ūdī").

31. Muʿādh b. Ḥabīb b. 'Amr b. 'Umar b. İbne Aww was appointed by the Prophet as judge of al-Yaman, and helped to collect revelations of the Koran. He died about 18/639 (Ibn al-Nadim, Fihrist, 62, 1045).

32. Bāṭil is translated "one" rather than "some"; the referent is singular (Wehr, Dictionary, 67).

33. The term used, baniyya, stands for a descendant or a member of a family, clan or tribe.

34. Ahmad related this hadith from Rābi'ah al-Aslamī in a lengthy narration. The transmission is of fair authority (hassan) (Tirmidhi).

35. Reference is to early ascetics who did not marry, but felt that if they did, a wife would distract them from their devotion to the One; consequently, their material needs were the barest minimum. Al-Suhrawardi reiterates this in his commentary in the margins of the Ahzāriyāh edition (Ahdwān al-Ma'dīrī, 78).

36. Abu 'Ubaydah b. 'Amr b. 'Abd Allāh, was born near Merv ca. 150/767 and died in Baghdad in 227/841. Bishr, who studied traditions in Baghdad, abandoned formal learning for the "life of a mercidient, destitute, starving and barefoot," hence he "derived every law from traditional sources. This compels him to be very indulgent to the hadith and sometimes to admit very feeble traditions as the basis of his decision." He was a founder of one of the four madhābi (juridical rites) in Islam, the Hanbalī school. He did not establish a fiqh (jurisprudence) system of his own but did answer pupils' questions pertaining specifically to legal matters. His son, 'Abdullah, collected the traditions and lectures in the Munad (Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed., s.v. "hadith").

37. That is, he was in an unenviable position.

38. Al-Qushayri uses maridāt and maqām in the same context. He discusses twenty stations along the mystic's path, the first of which is repentance (taubah), (Rūdūd, 253–408; see also Husaynī, Kāfīr al-Mafīrī, 294; and Arberry, Sūrat, 75–79).

39. Saqāf (you encounter me) was translated instead of saqāfī (he encounters me), as in the Azhariyya edition, to agree with the subject.

40. Ibrahim Ibn Adham, or Abū Isḥāq Ibrahim b. Adham, was born in Bakh of pure Arab descent—a prince who renounced his kingdom somewhat after the fashion of the Budāwa. His conversion is a classic in Sufi legend. He left his kingdom and family to become an itinerant dervish, living an ascetic life, then gathered a following. He died ca. 165/782 in Syria (Farid al-Dīn Aṭṭār, Muslim Saints and Mystics, 62).

41. Farid al-Dīn Aṭṭār maintains that Ibn Adham was married (Muslim Saints and Mystics, 68).

42. Maqūdshī is one who "fought against unbelievers and the like in the way of God, that is, in the cause of religion" (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 473).

43. Rābūh literally means "a bending of the torso from an upright position, followed by two prostrations in [Muslim prayer rituals]" (Wehr, Dictionary, 358).

44. Reference is probably to the Arabized Muslims whereby the "Arabic civilization becomes Muslim civilization, and it is the spontaneous collaboration of the best minds of all the Empire's nationalities that accounts for the stupendous rise of this civilization in those two hundred years, from 750 to 950, so breathlessly crowded of human accomplishment" (Von Grunebaum, Medieval Islam, 201).

45. Abū Yaśar relates this hadith from Ḥadhīfah, and al-Khāṭībī in al-'Udārīkī from his own hadith and the hadith of Abū Amāmah; both weak transmittals (Tirmidhi).

46. Al-Khāṭībi related this hadith in al-'Urdūk from the hadith of Ibn Minākī who was guided by al-Bayhaqī in al-Zahār, who was guided by the hadith of Abū Hurayrah; all weak transmittals (Tirmidhi).

47. Al-Qādirī related this hadith in the Munad of al-Shahābī (followed by other references and transmittals); both transmittal lines are weak (Tirmidhi).

48. Abū Sulaymān al-Dīrānī, a mystic of the ninth century, died in Syria in 215/830. To him is attributed the first delineations of the doctrine of maqāmāt (stations) of the Sufi path (Jāmi', Naqshal al-Un, 39).

49. See al-Suhrawardi, Ahdwān al-Ma'dīrī, 76.

50. Al-Ghazālī is apparently voicing his discontent toward the writers of hadith in emulation of Muhammad, who said to those writing hadith, "Do you not know that nothing but the writing of books besides the book of God led astray the peoples that were before you?” (Guillaume, Traditions of Islam, 16).

51. Abū al-Hasan Ahmad b. al-Hawwāri was from Damascus, and was a scholar and a mystic. He died in 230-31/644-45 (Ibn al-Nadim, Fihrist, 456, 1002).

52. In the Hadīthi edition yusūlīh is used to imply that producing children is the primary aim of coitus; in the Azhariyyah edition ṣabīḥ is used when a child is the accidental result of coitus.

53. The term is used, which commemorates a male or female offspring.

54. That is, increase the ranks of the faithful (Muslims).

55. That is, after the father has passed away.

56. Although the verse, Kor. 2:248 ("Abū"); rules out intercourse in Islam, many Muslims believe in it: “And fear the day when no soul shall serve as a substitute for another soul at all, nor shall intercourse be accepted for it; nor shall ransom be taken from it; nor shall they be helped.”

57. This is a reference to the reports that in the Jāḥiṣah (pre-Islam) period Arabs buried their daughters alive. W. R. Smith asserts that the reason for this was twofold: fear by the parents that they could not provide for all their offspring and fear that their daughters might be taken captive and thus bring disgrace on their kin (Kinship and Marriage, 291–96; see also Fyee, Muhammadan Law, 19).

58. Al-Ghazālī expounds further on this subject from a slightly different position in chapter 3. In the hadith, there are transmittals both allowing and disapproving coitus interruptus. See Wensinck, Handbook, 112.

59. Watt explains “lend” as “contributing to God’s causes” (Companion to the Qur’an, 43).

60. His use of such terms as āfand and ḥaqīq may be conscious allusions to Sufi significations since both constitute final states in the Sufi’s search for communion with God; āfand is the annihilation or passing away of the self, but is not equivalent to the cessation of the individual consciousness as in Nirvana; and ḥaqīq is the “subsistence or remaining” in God (Ibne, Le Lenguage de Chasub, 265; see also Huswir, Kash-al-Mad'ah, 243; and Encyclopaedia of Islam, new ed., s.v. "āfand").

61. The hadith states that “God says.” It is repeated by al-Bukhārī from the hadith of Abū Hurayra that Muḥammad al-Qatāwānī is the only one who quoted it (Irāqī).

62. The complete verse is: “Who hath created life and death that He may try you” (Kor. 67:2).

63. The Azhariyyah edition adds: wa yuṣ̄ul al-waqf—that is, “and coitus results as a consequence of desire.”

64. Al-ramā' (trotting) and al-ṣīfī (cloaking) are performed in imitation of the Prophet and his companions who did these things so that the people of Mecca might know that there was strength in them (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 1159).

65. The text is al-ṣīfī (ransom, sacrifice, redeem), but al-ṣīfī of the Azhariyyah edition was translated to mean “emulation.”

66. Abū Umar al-Tawāqūl indicates this hadith in his book Muḥāsharat al-Aḥlām, basing it on the transmittal of 'Umar b. al-Khaṭḥāb, but this cannot be supported or justified (Irāqī).

67. Al-Bayhaqī reveals this hadith from the hadith of Ibn Abī 'Abdiyyah al-Sudāfī as genuine (ṣahih) and based on 'Aa'id b. Yāsir as the ultimate source (Irāqī).

68. Ibn Ḥabbān relates it in his Dhīqān (book of weak transmittals) as related by Bahāz b. Ḥakīm, who quoted his father, who quoted his grandfather; weak transmittals (Irāqī).

70. Muslim relates the hadith from Abū Hurayrah (Irāqī).

71. Ibn Ḥabbān first related this hadith in the Dhīqān from the transmittals of Bahāz b. Ḥakīm, who related it from his father, who related it from his grandfather; it is not genuine. However, al-Nişā’ī related it from the hadith of Abū Hurayrah in a good (ṣahih) transmittal. He states that “it was said to them to enter paradise; they would say, ‘Not until our parents enter,’ then it would be said, ‘Enter paradise, you and your parents’” (Irāqī).

72. The hadith in its entirety does not have a reliable source (Irāqī).

73. Al-Bazzār and al-Ṭabarānī related the hadith from Zāhūrah b. Abī 'Aqīma; and by Muslim from the hadith of Abū Hurayrah (Irāqī).

74. Al-Bukhārī relates the hadith from Anas without mentioning “even two”; Ahmad related this addition from the hadith of Muḥādh which is agreed upon (waṣīfiyya tāhidah) (Irāqī).

75. The word is waṣīd (sing. waṣīdū), that is, “newborn children, young infants”; a child who dies in early infancy, or who is prematurely born, is in paradise (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 2906).

76. Lane quotes this whole hadith from Nukah al-Miṣāmaamī (Arabian Society, 197–98).

77. In the Azhariyyah edition, it is “al-ṣīfī” which would be translated as “divine conceitment.”

78. The Sufis are referred to as those who are knowledgeable in the esoteric, hidden or inner meanings (Ibne, Le Lenguage de Chasub, 39).

79. The verse before Kor. 6:75, which lends meaning to the quotation, is: “And those who disbelieve are protectors one of another—if ye do not . . .”

80. The term literally means “the members, or limbs, of a man, with which things are gained or earned, or with which one works” (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 405).

81. Al-Ghazālī uses waṣīd, which is a Sufi term for a novice or disciple of a murshid or teacher of a Sufi order who is on the Path to attain the knowledge of the One (al-Qaṣṣāyir, Risālah, 731, 746–50; see also Palacios, La Espiritualidad de Algin, 406).

82. The concept of the heart and its purification is a main tenet of the Sufis in attaining their goal (al-Qaṣṣāyir, Risālah, 566).

83. al-Surhawardi, 'Awdīf al-Maṣīf, 54).

84. Possibly Irāqī Ṭak̄akhā (d. 17/755), one of the companions of the Prophet and a transmitter of hadith (Goldziher, Muslim Studios, 2:29; see also note 25). It is related here to a transmitter in Ibn Kathīr’s Taṣfīr al-Qur’ān, 541).

85. Watt refers to this verse (Kor. 2:286) as “charges . . . to its capacity”; that is, “requires of no one more than he is able to perform” (Companion to the Qur’an, 43).

86. See note 28, this chapter, for identity of 'Akrāmah.
87. This is possibly Abî al-Hâjîj Mughîb b. Jahf, of Mecca, who lived from 21/642 to 104/722 and was a disciple of Ibn 'Abbâs and an authority for reading and commentary on the Koran (Ibn al-Nadîm, Fihrist, 1061).

88. "Darkness: sometimes said to mean an eclipse of the moon," as interpreted by Wast (Companion to the Qur'an, 333).

89. Muslim relates the hadith from Ibn 'Umar, which is confirmed by the hadith of Abî Sa'id. However, Muslim was unable to affirm its utterance (Ibrâîî).

90. Al-Ba'âqî relates it in the Inoocations (al-Dhâbâ'ah) from the hadith of Umm Salamah in a transmission which contained weaknesses (Ibrâîî).

91. Hadith; as set forth in the Inocations (Ibrâîî).

92. Literally, the text states that he "became stationary between His hands" (Wehr, Dictionary, 1091-92).

93. Ahmad related it from the hadith of Abî Kabshah al-Annârî—its chain of authority is reliable (gârîb), and al-Tirmîdhi relates something similar from the hadith of Abî Hurayrah. The tradition is genuine (zahîh) (Ibrâîî).

94. This is also related by Ibn Hanbal, Maqâmât, 3:348, 395.

95. This is the hadith of Jâbâr. It was related by Muslim and al-Tirmîdhi—it is of fair authority (Ibrâîî).

96. Al-maghâyiibât (absentee) was translated because of the context, rather than al-mughâbih (outcome, consequence), in the Ashâriyah edition.

97. Al-Tirmîdhi related it from the hadith of Jâbâr; it is authentic (gahrih) (Ibrâîî).

98. From the hadith of Ibn 'Abbâs. It was stated by the Prophet and related by al-Bukhârî (Ibrâîî).

99. A son born of a concubine automatically becomes a slave as was the custom in the pre-Islamic period. On the other hand, a distinction was made also between the sons of a foreign woman and those of a freeborn tribeswoman (W. R. Smith, Kinship and Marriage, 89).

100. See 2 Peter 3:8: "But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day."

101. The Arabic term 'adam (literally, "a learned man"; a scholar knowledgeable in Islamic beliefs) is not used as frequently at the plural form 'adamî (tehme) (Ibrâîî).

102. Hadîth. It was so stated to Hassan b. 'Ali. This utterance was said to Jarîfâ b. Abî Talib and agreed upon by the hadith of al-Barrâ'. However, Hassan also resembled the Prophet . . . which is agreed upon in the hadith of Jâbâr; al-Tirmîdhi corrected it. Ibn Hâbîb relates it from the hadith of 'Abas who said, "No one resembles the Prophet more than 'Abas." (Ibrâîî).

103. Ahmad related it from the hadith of al-Miqdâd b. Ma'âsîyârah in a chain of authority which is considered reliable (Ibrâîî).

104. Mughîrâh Ibn Shërâh, a companion and marâjir, died ca. 48 or 51/668-671. He holds in tradition a record for marriages and divorces which varies: 300, 700, or 1,000. Among the public officers he held was the governorship of Kîfâ. His slave, Abu Lu'ušah, assassinated Caliph 'Umar (Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed., s.v. "al-Mughîra b. Shërâh").

105. Ibn Hâbîb relates it from the hadith of Abî Dhâr in a lengthy tradition from the scriptures of Abûraham (Ibrâîî).

106. The Ashâriyah rendition of tâbîn (desirous) was used, and not tâbîn (journeying) which appears in the Malabî edition.

107. This is in reference to the verse, "Take thou provisions from the present world, i.e., make thou provision in it, for the world to come" (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 1267).

108. Same transmission and narration as in note 105, this chapter.

109. In a Sufi context, itâdâk connotes a willful determination to undertake the rigors of the Path, that is, to have the "desire" to seek nothing but what God desires (Abriyam, Sâmîm, 77).

110. A similar tradition with a different connotation and spelling (fatâra) given by Lane states, "Verily there is an eagerness [hurah] for the Kor-an: then men have a weakness [fârâf] of it" (Arabic-English Lexicon, 1525; see also 'abri, who refers to it as a "natural disposition" that exists in the heart to know God (Le Lexique de Gazzah, 222-23)).

111. Al-Najâd and al-Tabâri relate it from the hadith of 'Abdallah b. 'Umar, and al-Tirmîdhi related something similar from the hadith of Abî Hurayrah. The tradition is genuine (zâhîh) (Ibrâîî).

112. This is related by Ibn 'Adiyy, Ibn 'Abbâs, al-Aqîlî, Ibn Hâbîb, and al-Andî; all weak transmitters (Ibrâîî). Hurâb is a dish of cooked meat and bulgur (al-Jâhîz, Le Livre des ouvrages de Gazzah, 310).

113. Al-Najâd and al-Tabâri relate it from the hadith of 'Abdallah in a good transmission. However, al-Aqîlî weakened it (Ibrâîî).

114. Literally, dibh means "mentioning Allah," enjoined upon Muslims in the Koran; or in a Sufi context, "the glorifying of Allah with certain fixed phrases, repeated in a ritual order, either aloud or in the mind, with peculiar breathings and physical movements" (Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed., s.v. "dhikr"); see also al-Qashâhây, Ri'dâsh, 464-71.

115. Al-Tirmîdhi related it and improved it; it was also related by Ibn Mâjah; there is a break in the chain of authority (Ibrâîî).

116. The terms he uses here are dhâkhr (remembrances) and shakhr (thanksgiving), both metaphorical terms (al-Qashâhây, Ri'dâsh, 338-49; see also note 114).

117. Possible reference to his wives as a unit. His devil is not as was defined earlier—i.e., when a woman approaches, she approaches in the form of a devil—but is used here in a metaphorical sense. In this instance, she abetted his fulfillment of Muslim obligations, hence equating the two devil-Muslims.

118. Al-Khâyb related it in the history [of Baghdad] from the hadith of Ibn 'Umar. This was also related by Muslim from the hadith of Ibn Mâvî'id (Ibrâîî).

119. There are three suras (Kor. 22:53, Kor. 75:2, and Kor. 89:27-30) that deal with the physical, moral, and spiritual levels of "self." Al-Ghazzâli comments on the first two. See also Jâbei, Le Lexique de Gazzah, 250-65.

120. Al-Mowrid relates it in the hadith of Ibn 'Abbâs, it was preceded by the words "sixty years." It is agreed upon by the hadith of Ibn 'Umar (Ibrâîî).
122. Al-Ghazzālī fails here to give the other two counts.

123. In Islamic law, ṣubūq is a legally prescribed alms tax (Wehr, Dictionary, 509).

124. Agreed upon from the hadith of Ibn Mas'ūd and others in which fi [literally, "mouth"] is included (I'raqī). The Aszhrayh edition gives jā'ara ila fi inna taški, while the translated text excludes fi. Another interpretation could be to "offer it to the mouth" of his wife.

125. This refers to "The Substitutes, or Lieutenants, that is, certain righteous persons, of whom the world is never destitute; when one dies, God substituting another in his place." According to some, the assertion refers to seventy men, while according to others, to seven (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 168).

126. Abū Ya'la relates it from the hadith of Abī Sā'id al-Khūdhārî in a weak transmission (I'raqī). The "two women" he refers to are not identified.

127. Ibn Mājah relates it from the hadith of Umār b. Ḥusayn. The transmission is weak (Tehfīq). The "two women" he refers to are not identified.

128. Abūnād relates it from the hadith of 'Aīshah. However, he stated bāz-tas [in sadness, grief] while Layth b. Abī Sallām does not agree (I'raqī). As was expressed in the beginning of the fifth advantage, through tolerance and exercise of just protection of the family and children, a man can gain "salvation," or atone for his sins.

130. Al-Khāṭīb relates it in Makhmūt al-akhkhār in a weak transmission but does not differ from the referent, Ibn 'Abdāb. This hadith is also related by Al-Daw'î and al-Tirmidhī who have worthy transmitters, but there is still controversy over its transmission (I'raqī).

131. See gharîb in the Glossary.

132. The text uses jā'ara to imply extraneous or physical acts. See note 80, this chapter.

133. That is, because he has sufficiently subdued his passions.

134. This contradicts his statement in the Conclusions (this chapter), wherein he states it as a condition and not as an absolute: ... to earn gain in an improper way is unlawful. Seeking gain takes place continually and in it lies his [ultimate] ruin and the ruin of his family.

135. The scales are those on which the deeds will be weighed on the day of judgment (see Kor. 4:59, Kor. 5:9 [Allī]).

136. I'raqī stated that he could not find a basis for the origin of this hadith.

137. The author of the Firdaws mentioned it from the hadith of Abī Sā'īd. However, the son of Abī Mansūr could not find it in his Ma'am (I'raqī).

138. Yūza (redeem) instead of ṣafqa (remain) was translated from the Aszhrayh edition.

139. Abū Dā'ūd and Al-Nisā'a related it by stating "whom he abandons," rather than "for whom he provides." Muslim had still a third version (I'raqī).

140. The author of the statement apparently is referring to the emptying of the heart, a station on the path of union with God which is an arduous process. Hence the novice can barely take care of himself much less be occupied with and care for another being. See also note 145, this chapter.

141. See note 40, this chapter.

142. Watts translated it (Kor. 2:228) as: "Women have such honourable rights as obligations." Literally, he states that women "have rights similar to their duties according to what is honourable (or reputable) or customary." This is sometimes said to mean that both parties should keep the way open for reconciliation (Commentary to the Qurān, 41).

143. That is, he is afraid even to raise a chicken lest he leave it on the road and become a butcher. Al-Suhrawardī restates this and the need for a Sufi to be preoccupied with his own needs (Awālī, al-Madīnî, 78).

144. Meaning a master over his place of abode.

145. Al-Bukhārī related it from the hadith of Abū Sabīl who also repeated "they are eleven" (I'raqī). One tradition states that the Prophet had nine wives, among whom were: "Aīsha, daughter of Abī Bakr; Ḥafṣa, daughter of 'Umar; Umm Habiba, daughter of Abī Sufyān; Umm Salama, daughter of Abū Umayya b. al-Mughirah; Sadiq, daughter of 'Amra b. Qays; Zamāmah, daughter of Ḥuyay b. Abī Akhrab" (see al-Bukhārī, Sahih, 7:4, and 'Abd al-Baqī, Li'ān, 1:74).

146. Another tradition states that he married thirteen women, among whom is Khadijat (daughter of Khawīfīl) who was his first wife (Guilaume, Life of Muhammad, 792).

147. Al-Bukhārī related it from the hadith of Anas which also contains the statement that the Prophet received revelations while he was in the bed of 'Aīshah and not the others (I'raqī).

148. Ibn 'Abbās has a similar allegory: "L'eau, c'est la science; et les ruisseaux, les cours" (Massigons, Les Origines du lexique technique, 159-40).

Chapter 2. AS CONCERNS-MARRIAGE CONDITIONS OF THE WOMAN AND STIPULATIONS OF THE MARRIAGE CONTRACT

1. The text has "ṣulūm," but the term actually implies ultimate authority holder.

2. This hadith is from Ibn 'Umar who states: "Does not engage his brother's fiancée until the engaged man leaves her, or permission is taken for him" (I'raqī). See also al-Shāfi'ī, Riddās, 307.

3. He is referred to as 'Umar II, who ruled from a.d. 717 to 720. He was renowned for his piety and asceticism and was considered the only pious member of the Umayyad Caliphate (Hitti, History of the Arabs, 219-22).

4. The term al-sabda bī-ṣirāṣ is used here to describe an ideal combination; it is misspelled in the Ḥalabī edition, where tirsiyān (shield, disk of the sun) is given.

5. Name of the tenth month of the Muslim year.

6. The Prophet contracted the marriage to 'Aishah when she was seven and lived with her in Medina when she was nine or ten. She was the only virgin that he married. Her father, Abū Bakr, married her to him (Guilaume, Life of Muhammad, 792).

7. Muslim related it from the hadith of 'Aīshah (I'raqī).

8. This list is al-Ghazzālī’s compilation of divergent views. However, for an elaboration of these views and practices observed by the four juridical rites—Hanāfī, Ḥanbalī, Ṣafā'ī, Mālikī—as well as Sunni versus Shī'a concepts, see Hughes, who expounds upon many prohibitions (Dictionary of Islam, 314-18), and Fynee (Muhaddith Munawwar Lakhnawi, 92-95, 106-8).
9. Muhammad decreed that Muslims cannot marry a Magian except under certain circumstances. Magians were a religious sect in Persia that was reformed by Zoroaster in the sixth century before Christ (Hughes, Dictionary of Islam, 310).

10. The term kafirah refers to a female of the Ahl al-Kifah (or those who possess an inspired Book, i.e., Jews, Christians, or Sabaeans) (Hughes, Dictionary of Islam, 280). According to the Shi'ites, the term can also extend to Samaritians, Sabaeans, and Zoroastrians (Pizzey, Muhammadan Law, 94).

11. The Azhariyah edition states, "does not fear fornication."

12. When two unrelated people are nursed by the same woman, they are considered to be blood brothers or sisters (Hughes, Dictionary of Islam, 314).

13. The Halabi edition indicates "grandmother." However, the Azhariyah word was translated here meaning "granddaughter."

14. For a further explanation, see al-Shafi'i, Risalah, 205–6.

15. ‘Iddat hina‘idat is final divorce whereby the woman cannot remarry the husband, contrary to ‘Iddat al-rif‘ah, whereby she can (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 285–86, 1040).

16. The concept of kalf (literally, "untying" or "removing") is that after a man divorces his wife, she has to become the wife of another man, the mukallal, before he can remarry her; mukallal literally means one who "unites or resolves" the problem, making her lawful to remarry her husband (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 619–20).

17. Lī ḍinār is the oath of condemnation; it can also be, in Islamic law, a "sworn allegation of adultery committed by either husband or wife" (Wehr, Dictionary, 870).

18. Al-Ghazali uses the term thayyibah yaghribah for "deflowered young woman."

19. Literally, the term jami‘ah means "to safeguard her sexual organ." See chapter 1, note 21.

20. This hadith was related by Abū Dā‘ud and al-Nisā‘ī, which was related from the hadith of Ibn ʻAbbās. Al-Nisā‘ī stated that this hadith was not agreed upon, while Ahmad stated it was of weak authority (munkar). Also al-Jawzī mentioned it in Al-Masādir (ʻIraqī).

21. Agreed upon; from the hadith of Abū Hurayrah (ʻIraqī). Tarhak yaddak is a form of imprecation meaning, "May thine arm, or thy hands, cleave to the dust, or earth, by reason of poverty." (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 300).

22. Al-Tabarānī related this hadith in Al-Awsaf from the hadith of Anas. Another version of this hadith was related by Ibn Ḥabīb in al-Dirifa (a collection of weak transmittals) (ʻIraqī).

23. Ibn Mājah related it from the hadith of ʻAbdAllah b. ʻUmar in a weak transmittal (ʻIraqī).

24. See chapter 1, note 27.

25. Al-Tirmidhī related and refined this transmittal from the hadith of Jahīs stating that God said, "I detest and shall keep away on the Day of Resurrection the prattler, the braggart, and the long-winded." This transmittal was also related and refined by Al-Tirmidhī and Abū Dā‘ud from the hadith of ʻAbdAllah b. ʻUmar (ʻIraqī).

26. Sa‘îd, the term used here, denotes an itinerant derivative as well.

27. In Islamic law, a compensation (khul‘ah) must be paid by the wife when a divorce is sought by her (Hughes, Dictionary of Islam, 274). This law is laid down in Kor. 2:229: "And if ye fear that they may not be able to keep the limits of Allah, in that case it is no sin for either of them if the woman ransom herself."

28. Nashīn is the noun derived from the same root as nāshī: In Islamic law, nashī means "violation of marital duties on the part of either husband or wife, specifically, recalcitrance of the woman toward her husband, and brutal treatment of the wife by the husband" (Wehr, Dictionary, 966).

29. Share'a is the Muslim law derived from the Koran, the hadith, and the processes of jurisprudence (Ibn al-Nadim, Fihrist, 923).

30. Ibn Mājah related this hadith in a weak transmittal from the hadith of b. Mālamah. It was also related by al-Tirmidhī and al-Nisā‘ī with slight variations.

31. The Anṣār, or Medinans, were followers of Muhammad and early converts who granted him refuge after the Hegira (Hughes, Dictionary of Islam, 16).

32. Muslim related it from the hadith of Abū Hurayrah (ʻIraqī).

33. Abu Bakr Sulaymān al-A‘mash, a traditionist, died in Kufa in 148/765. He received traditions from al-Zuhrawī and Mālik b. Anas. He was also a great admirer of "All (Enyclopedia of Islam, new ed., s.v. "al-A‘mash")."

34. The words "to Būtal" were left out of this text, but they do occur in previous editions. Būtal, an Abyssinian Negro who was freed by the Prophet, became the first muezzin in Islam. Muhammad honored and distinguished him as the "first fruits of Abyssinia" (Hughes, Dictionary of Islam, 42).

35. Mālik b. Dinār al-Sāmī, who died at the age of ninety in 151/748 at Basra, is mentioned as a reliable traditionist, transmitting from such authorities as Mālik b. Anas and Ibn Sīrīn. He was the son of a Persian slave from Sijistān (or Kūbul) who became a disciple of Ḥānas b. Basra (a mystic) (Hujwīrī, Kādhe al-Muhīrī, 189; Ibn al-Nadim, Fihrist, 1037).

36. A hauri is a white-skinned, black-eyed woman who is referred to as a virgin of paradise, or a nymph of the Islamic paradise. Al-haurūr and the Arabic word for hours (sing. ḫur, pl. ḫarāḥ) are derived from the same root. See Kor. 35:56–78 for a complete description of the women of paradise.

37. Al-Nisā‘ī related this hadith from the hadith of Abū Hurayrah in a genuine transmittal. Ahmad and Abū Dā‘ud related this hadith from Ibn ʻAbbās in a genuine transmittal (ʻIraqī).

38. Related by Ibn ʻAbdAllah b. ʻAbbās. This was also related by ʻAbdAllah b. ʻUmar to a weak transmittal (ʻIraqī).

39. It was related by the transmitters of the sunna and extending to ʻUmar, al-Tirmidhī enhanced it (ʻIraqī).

40. "Darham" may be used for money or for a silver coin (Ibn al-Nadim, Fihrist, 910).

41. Related by Abū Dā‘ud al-Taylīshī and al-Bazārī from the hadith of Anas; by al-Tabarānī in Al-Awsaf from the hadith of Abū Sa‘īd; and by Ahmad from the hadith of ʻAli; and by al-Hākim who made its transmittal reliable (ʻIraqī).

42. "Ilīy comes from the term ʻilāyah and is translated here to mean a "stone, sometimes placed upon two other stones, upon which is put to dry the preparation of curd; also used for other purposes” (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 5146). It is difficult to ascertain any other referent here. The word was deleted from the Arzahari edition.
43. Mudâ, a dry-measure. “It is a quarter of a sīf; the sīf being five pints and one third; such was the mudâ of the Prophet” (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 2697).
44. Al-Bukhârî related this hadith from the hadith of ʿĀishah (ʿIrāqī).
45. Related by al-ʿAbī ʿAbdallāh from the hadith of Anas and also by Muslim (ʿIrāqī). Sāʻūdī is a kind of mush made of wheat or barley. It can also be made with sugar and dates (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 1472).
46. Related by al-ʿAbī ʿAbdallāh from the hadith of ʿUmar. Al-Tirmidhî stated that it was genuine and of fair authority (ṣaḥḥah saḥīḥ) (ʿIrāqī).
47. This is from the hadith of Anas stating that ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. ʿAwf got married for five dirhams. It was related by al-Bayhâqî (ʿIrāqī).
49. Ahmad and al-Bayhâqî related this hadith from the hadith of ʿĀishah. Its chain of authority is reliable (ʿIrāqī).
50. This is related by Abu ʿUmar al-Tawqânî from the hadith of ʿĀishah and by Ahmad and al-Bayhâqî. Its transmission is reliable (ʿIrāqī).
51. Sufyân al-Thawrî, or Abu ʿAbd Allâh Sufyân Ibn Saʿd al-Thawrî, was claimed by the Sufis as a saint. He was an ascetic who founded a school of jurisprudence which survived for about two centuries. However, he opposed the authorities and was compelled to go into hiding in Mecca. He was born in Kufa in 97/715 and died at Basra in 161/778 (Farid al-Dîn ʿAṭṭar, Muslim Saints and Mystics, 129).
52. This is related by al-Bukhârî in the book al-ʿAlâd al-Musnad and by al-Bayhâqî from the hadith of Abû Hurayrah in a reliable chain of authority (ʿIrāqī).
53. Abû Dâd and al-Nisârî related it from the hadith of Muḥâl b. Yâsâr. Its chain of authority is genuine (ʿIrāqī).
54. This transmits is agreed upon from the hadith of Jâbir (ʿIrāqī).
55. The Arzahari edition uses the comparative form anasak (sures). While the Ḥalabî edition uses asak (to assure, convince).
56. This was related in a tradition as follows: “Avoid ye the beautiful woman that is of ‘bad origin’; she is thus likened to the herbage that grows in the ditches (dung), that appears to be in a flourishing condition, but is unwholesome as food, and of stinking origin” (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 916).
57. Al-Dînâqûtî related this hadith in al-ʿAlâd and stated that al-Waqîṣî repeated it but made it weak (ʿIrāqī).
58. Al-ʿIrāqîs mā ṣūṣûm means “the radical, or ancestral, or hereditary, quality is wont to return to its usual possessor; or it may mean, is wont to draw” (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 916).
59. Ibn al-Salâh stated that he could find no basis for this hadith (ʿIrāqī).
60. Related by Abû ʿUmar al-Tawqânî in Mâṣāḥarat al-ʿAlâyân. This is supported by the hadith of ʿĀishah and ʿAmmâa, daughters of Abû Bakr. The transmittal is genuine (ʿIrāqī).
61. Grandson of the Prophet, “All’s son.”

Chapter 3. ETIQUETTE OF COHABITATION, WHAT SHOULD TAKE PLACE DURING THE MARRIAGE, AND THE OBLIGATIONS OF HUSBAND AND WIFE.
1. This is from the hadith of Anas—agreed upon (ʿIrāqī).
2. Muhammad consummated his marriage with ʿAṣâfîyyah b. Ḥuyayy, who was a captive and was married without a dowry, on his return from Khaibar (Seens, Marriage in Early Islam, 86).
3. This was related from the hadith of Anas by the four transmitters of hadith (ʿIrāqī). See chapter 2, note 45, for description of saʿūdâ.
4. This hadith is attributed to al-Tirmidhî who related it from the hadith of Ibn Masʿûd, and who made the transmission weak.
5. Ḥârîrî means “authentic, but resting on the authority of only one companion” (Guillaume, Traditions of Islam, 181).
6. Hadith of Abû Hurayrah as related by Abû Dâd and al-Tirmidhî; Ibn Mâjah perfected and introduced it in the Ḥadîthuʾn (ʿIrāqī).
7. It was related and enhanced by al-Tirmidhî, and by Ibn Mâjah from the hadith of Muhammad b. Ḥatîb (ʿIrāqī). The term saʿūd (voice) is used to imply singing.
8. This was related by al-Tirmidhî from the hadith of ʿĀishah; however, al-Bayhâqî enhanced it and made it weak (ʿIrāqī).
9. Hadith of al-Rubaysî, daughter of Muḥâdîd, as was related by al-Bukhârî with a slight change (ʿIrāqī).
10. “All interprets it to mean “anything that has no civil rights. It includes captives or slaves, people in your power” (Holy Qurʾān, 191, n.553).
12. Al-Nisârî brought it forth in al-Kutub, and Ibn Mâjah from the hadith of Umm Salamah. The Prophet never ceased to stress “prayers and what your right hand possesses.” In reference to the care of women, he stressed this in the last pilgrimage which was related by Muslim from the hadith of Jâbir b. Ṭâwil (ʿIrāqī).
13. This refers to “a recompense, or reward, from God to a man, for righteous conduct” (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 24).
14. ʿIrâqī could not find any basis for this hadith. However, see Kor. 2:89 in support of this statement.
15. This is related from the hadith of ʿUmar as stated in the hadith of al-Ṭâwil—agreed upon (ʿIrāqī).
16. The earlier hadith did not contain “O foolish woman,” and “he is better than you” (ʿIrāqī).
17. Ḥâfîz was the daughter of Caliph Umar and the second wife of the Prophet (Guillaume, Life of Muhammad, 792).
18. See Kor. 66:1-3. Abû Bakr was “Abâ’s father.
19. No basis can be found for this transmittal (ʿIrāqī).
20. Al-Tirâbî transmitted it in al-Amâsî as did al-Khathîb in al-Tarîkh. Both transmitters are weak and come from the hadith of ʿĀishah (ʿIrāqī).
21. Abû Yaʿlî brought it forth in his Munâd and Abû al-Shaṭîr in Kaws al-Amâshî from the hadith of ʿĀishah, which was also transmitted by Ibn Iṣâqî (ʿIrāqī).
22. Related from the hadith of ‘Abdullah—agreed upon (‘Iraqi).

23. This was first related by the two šaykhs from the hadith of ‘Umar and Ibn al-‘As; then Ibn al-Jawzi shaped it and related it in al-Manadur from the hadith of Anas; . . . however, his love for Khadija is well known and documented in the hadith (‘Iraqi).

24. From the hadith of ‘Abd Allah—agreed upon without exception. It was related with the addition by al-Zabary b. Bakkar and al-Khairi (‘Iraqi).

27. Abû Dā’ûd and al-Nisâî related it in al-Kabir, and Ibn Mâjah from the hadith of ‘Abd Allah—the transmission is genuine (‘Iraqi).

28. Al-Hâshani b. Sulaymân related it in his Ma‘mad from the hadith of Anas without his saying “with his wives”; it was also related by al-Bazzar and al-Tâbarînî in al-Saghîr and al-Awsat by stating “with his children,” which was supported by Ibn Lahî‘îh (‘Iraqi).

29. ‘A‘shûrâ’ is the name of the voluntary fast day. It s held the tenth day of Muharram on the anniversary of Husayn’s martyrdom at Kerbelah (60 A.H.). It is a day of mourning sacred to the Shi‘ites (Wehr, Dictionary, 614).

30. The hadith is agreed upon with few exceptions; “aloof day” rather than the day of ‘A‘shûrâ’ was mentioned; while al-Nisâî stated in his Kauthî that ‘Abd Allah said, “Don’t rush,” rather than, “Be quiet”; and that the Prophet said, “O she-ask!” The chain of authority is genuine (‘Iraqi).

31. It is a trustworthy transmission (taqab) which is related by the two šaykhs: al-Tirmidhî and al-Nisâî (‘Iraqi).

32. Al-Tirmidhî brought it forth and authenticated it from the hadith of Abû Hurayrah without saying, “and I am the best among you toward my wives”; and from the hadith of ‘Abd Allah, “people” was replaced by “wives” (‘Iraqi). Note, however, that “wife” is one of many meanings of the word ahl (Wehr, Dictionary, 33).

33. ‘Abd is translated here to mean “family.”

34. “Found a man,” that is, act like a man or be firm.

35. Abû Bakr b. Lâl related it in al-Mukhtâr al-Akhîy from the hadith of Abû Hurayrah in a weak transmission. It is also stated in the two šakîhs from the hadith of Jâriyah b. Wahab al-Khaizirî and Abû Dâ’ûd (‘Iraqi).

36. Agreed upon from the hadith of Zahir (‘Iraqi).

37. Munâ‘îþ also means “abstinence from things unlawful, or in chastity of manners, and the having some art or trade” (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 2702).

38. No basis was found for this statement. However, al-‘Iraqî related it from the hadith of Abû Hurayrah as, “Miserable is he who is a servant of the dinar and the dirham” (‘Iraqi).

39. Compare Kor. 14:34.

40. A fîr is the “space between the end of the thumb and the end of the index finger when extended” (Wehr, Dictionary, 694).

41. A cubit in Iraq and Syria is 0.68m. In Egypt it is 0.58m (Wehr, Dictionary, 309).

42. The Nabataeans were a tribal group who lived in Arabia as early as the seventh century B.C. During the Muslim period, the Arabs called those inhabitants of Syria and Iraq who were neither shepherds nor soldiers, “Nabataeans”—a term used in “a contemptuous tone to the Aramaic-speaking peasants” (Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed. s.v. “Nabataeans”).

43. For further details, see Kor. 12:28-31.

44. Al-Tâbarînî related it from the hadith of Abî Imâmah in a weak transmission; and Ahmad from the hadith of ‘Umar and b. al-‘As. However, al-Nisâî related in his Kauthî that the Prophet stated: “If among all the cows, there is a white-footed cow with a red head, then no woman shall enter Paradise except one like this cow.” This transmission is genuine (‘Iraqi).

45. Abî Mansîr al-Daylânî related it in the Masnad al-Firdaws from the hadith of Abû Hurayrah in a weak transmission. However, . . . a slight transmission . . . states the “three potencies, one of which is: ‘If you come to her, she will hurt you, and if you are away from her, she will be unfaithful to you.’” This was related by al-Tâbarînî from the hadith of Fadlallah b. ‘Ubayd as of fair authority (‘Iraqi).

46. From the hadith of ‘Abd Allah—agreed upon (‘Iraqi). It is interesting to note here that all the good transmissions concerning women were transmitted by women, especially by ‘Abd Allah.

47. See Kor. 60:3.

48. The translation given by Watt is, “If you two [Hafsa and ‘A‘shûrâ’] repent to God”; that is, “If you repent, good and well” (Companion to the Qur’an, 271).

49. This is agreed upon from the hadith of ‘Umar, and the two women are ‘A‘shûrâ’ and Hafsa (‘Iraqi).

50. Al-Bukhari related it from the hadith of Abî Bakr (‘Iraqi).

51. This is related by al-Tâbarînî in al-Dawât from the hadith of Jâbir. Muslim states that the Prophet “forbade the man to enter upon his wife at night; for he betrays them or seeks their faults.” However, al-Bukhari does not mention the prohibition of entering at night (‘Iraqi).

52. Ahmad related it from the hadith of Ibn ‘Umar. The transmission is reliable (‘Iraqi).

53. Agreed upon from the hadith of Abû Hurayrah (‘Iraqi). See al-Bukhari, Sahîh, 7:33-34. Ibn Hanbal quotes Abû Hurayrah differently: “Women were created from the rib which was not straightened at creation; if you straighten it . . .” (Musnad, 2:497).

55. From the hadith of Abû Hurayrah; al-Bukhari deleted “and the believer is jealous.” This is agreed upon (‘Iraqi).

56. Possibly refers to Sâ‘îd, who was in love with ‘Asmâ’. He was the subject of poetry and perhaps was himself a poet. There is a book entitled Sâ‘î and ‘Âmmâ’ whose traditions are transmitted among the “Names of the Passionate Lovers during the Pre Islamic Period, and the Period of Islam” (Ibn al-Nadim, Fihrist, 710, 1086).

57. From the hadith of al-Mughîrah b. Sharbuh—agreed upon (‘Iraqi).

58. From the hadith of Jâbir who deleted “The night I was taken through Paradise” and “maid”—agreed upon; he mentioned “maid” in another transmission from the hadith of Abû Hurayrah—also agreed upon (‘Iraqi).
59. Abū Dā'ūd, al-Nisā'ī, and Ibn Hibbān related it from the hadith of Jābir b. 'Atīk, but it was also related in four other hadiths (İrāqī).

60. The first part of the statement was related first, while the second part was related by Abū `Umar al-Tawqānī in the book, Muṣāhara al-Ṭahāri, from the narrative of 'Abdullāh b. Muhammad, and it appears that 'Abdullāh b. al-Ḥanafīyah is the transmitter (İrāqī).

61. Al-Bțazzār and al-Dārāqūṭī related it in al-Aẓāfād from the hadith of Aī. The transmittal is weak (İrāqī).

62. This is agreed upon from the hadith of Ibn `Umar, who stated, "The women were permitted to go to the mosques at night" (İrāqī).

63. From the hadith of Aī is agreed upon. However, al-Bukhārī related instead, "he would have prevented them from the mosques" (İrāqī).

64. Hadīth of Ibn `Umar which is agreed upon (İrāqī).

65. From the hadith of Umm Atṣayyāh—agreed upon (İrāqī).

66. Literally, that it is "safe" to "sit" or remain at home.

67. Watt translates "keep not thy hand chained" as meaning "do not be niggardly" (Companion to the Qur’an, 135).

68. From the hadith of Aī is—brought forth and made genuine (sādākh) by al-Tirmidhī (İrāqī).

69. Muslim related it from the hadith of Abū Hurayrah (İrāqī). Al-Tirmidhī states it differently in a genuine hadith: "The dinar which earns you the greatest reward is the one spent on your wife, your riding animal (dābhūh) and your companions in the way of God" (Sunan, 6:193).

70. Precepts as spelled out in codes based on the Shari'a.

71. Book 2 of the Ḫusās deals further with menstruation and prayer.

72. Reference is to the time element, because more than one ṣafāt is usually involved; hence she could not fully perform these ṣafāt within the prescribed period. For further details see Book 2 of the Ḫusās.

73. Presumably this is a reference to a Sufi ritual. See chapter 1, note 114.

74. From the hadith of Aī is—agreed upon (İrāqī). A preferable translation, found in Lane, is that "he ordered, or communed, them to cast, or draw lots, or to practice solitute [among themselves]" (Arabic-English Lexicon, 2087).

75. This was related by the authors of the Sunan and Ibn Hibbān, from the hadith of Abū Hurayrah [with slight variations] by Abū Dā'ūd, Ibn Hibban, and al-Tirmidhī stating, "He does not deal equitably between them" (İrāqī).

76. Hibbān and the authors of the Sunan related it from the hadith of Aī is (İrāqī).

77. From the hadith of `Umar and b. al-Āṣ—agreed upon—who related that when the Prophet was asked, "Whom do you love the most among your women?" he replied, "Aī is (İrāqī).

78. This hadith was related by Ibn Sarī in al-Tabqāh, and by al-Bukhārī from the hadith of Aī, and in the Sahāsīn [of Bukhārī and Muslim] (İrāqī). Abū al-Bāqī stated that the Prophet remained with Aī until his death (La tā, 3:185).

79. Abū Dā'ūd related it from the hadith of Aī; also related by al-Tahārānī, al-Bukhārī, and al-Ḥadīṣi with slight variations (İrāqī).

80. This was related from the hadith of Aī (İrāqī).

81. This is from the hadith of Anas. Ibn `Abī related it in al-Kāmil. This was related by al-Bukhārī who also stated that the Prophet had nine wives (İrāqī). See chapter 1, note 145.

82. See chapter 2, note 28.

83. Abū Dā'ūd and al-Nisā'ī related it in al-Kubrā and Ibn Mājah from a narration of Muṣāwīyah Ibn Haydāb—the transmittal is good and reliable (İrāqī).

84. Ibn al-Jawār related it in al-Waqāf without any support. This was also mentioned in the Sahāsīn [of Bukhārī and Muslim] from the hadith of `Umar as well as in a story from the hadith of Jābir (İrāqī).

85. Reference is made to the utterance of the formula, lá tālīh illa Allāh (There is no God but Allāh).

86. From the hadith of Ibn `Abīs—agreed upon (İrāqī).

87. This latter phrase, "and made thereof relatives and in-laws, for thy Lord is omnipotent," did not occur in the Asbāb an-Nūr (İrāqī). The Koran’s version (25:54) is: "And He is it Who hath created man from water, and hath appointed for him kindred by blood and kindred by marriage; for thy Lord is ever Powerful."

88. Qadā is the direction to which Muslims turn in praying (toward) the Ka'bah or a prayer niche which is a recess in a mosque indicating the direction of the Ka'bah (Wehr, Dictionary, 740).

89. Al-Khaṭīb related it from the hadith of Umm Salamah in a weak transmittal (İrāqī).

90. Ibn Mājah first related it from the hadith of `Abdāb in a weak transmittal (İrāqī).

91. Abu Mansūr al-Daylamī related it in the Munad al-Firdaws from the hadith of Anas—it is of weak authority (İrāqī).

92. Abu Mansūr al-Daylamī related it from a much shortened hadith, and this is some of the hadith with which he agrees (İrāqī).

93. This hadith was forwarded in the fifth chapter of the book of prayer (İrāqī).

94. Arabic has one term, mānā, which is here translated as "organism," "climax," "ejaculation," or "emission," since it would be difficult to use one English term for the referent.

95. See the complete reference in Kor. 2:222.

96. Everything that can happen to man, everything that he can do, falls into five categories in Islam: ṣafāt, ṣalāh, mudhak, makhrik, and ḫurān. "ṣafāt is that which is commanded, that which is unavoidable in order to find favour in the eyes of God, as giving of alms. Ṣalāh is doing good, meritorious acts in the sight of God. But it is not a sin to omit such acts.... Mudhak are the deeds which are indifferent to both God and man. Their number is not large and they bring neither reward nor punishment. Makhrik is the evil, but not the forbidden. One can commit it without fear of God's punishment. But the pious will omit it. Ḫurān ... is sin, express violations of God's commands. Whoever commits Ḫurān may be sure of God's punishment" (Essad, Muhammad, 355–56).

98. Ṣunah translated here as major ritual impurity, signifies a man "under the obligation of performing a total ablation, by reason of sexual intercourse and discharge of the semen" (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, 466).
118. Hadith of Ibn ‘Abbās. It was related by Ibn Mājah and al-Ḥakim. The transmittal is genuine (ʻIrāqī).
119. Hadith of Anas; al-Khārījī related it in Makhrūm Akhūdāy in a weak transmittal (ʻIrāqī).
120. Hadith of Anas, which was related by al-Khārījī in a weak transmittal (ʻIrāqī).
121. Iba‘īd.
122. Hadith Abū Hurayrah as related by al-Khārījī and al-Ḥakim, but it did not say ‘or sisters.’ The transmittal is genuine (ʻIrāqī).
123. ‘Adhāhāna (noun adhāhā) is “to call to prayer.” It is customary in Islam that a newborn baby should first hear the call to prayer, which always begins with allāhu akbar (God is the Greatest).
124. Hadith Abī Rāḥīm Abū Bakr Abū Dāwūd, and al-Tirmidhī related it and made it genuine. However, the transmittal of Ibn al-Qutbān is weak (ʻIrāqī).
126. Al-Tabarānī related it in al-Saḥīḥ from the hadith of Jābir in a weak transmittal (ʻIrāqī). Circumcision among the Jews, a practice dating from the time of Abraham, generally takes place on the eighth day (Genesis 17:10–12). In Islam, circumcision is founded upon the customs of the Prophet, as it is not once alluded to in the Koran. Circumcision is “recommended to be performed upon a boy between the ages of seven and twelve, but it is lawful to circumcise a child seven days after his birth” (Hughes, Dictionary of Islam, 57). Lane stated that circumcision on the seventh day is not approved, and that it is generally performed at the age of five or six (Arabian Society, 192).
127. Al-Tabarānī related this transmittal from the hadith of ʻAbd al-Mālik b. Abī Zuhayr, who in turn related it from his father, Mu‘ādhā. Its transmittal is genuine; al-Bayhaqī related it from the hadith of ʻAbd Allāh (ʻIrāqī). The word ʻabd refers to one of God’s qualities; the literal meaning is “servant.”
128. From the hadith of Jābir which is agreed upon when beginning with the verb tusaammu [is named] rather than saammu [name, command] (ʻIrāqī).
129. Ahmad and Ibn Habbān related it from the hadith of Abū Hurayrah; also related by Abī Dāwūd and al-Tirmidhī; and by Ibn Habbān from the hadith of Jābir: “Whoever gives my first name, should not give my surname; and whoever gives my surname, should not give my first name.” The transmittal is genuine (ʻIrāqī).
130. Abī ʻUmar al-Taqwānī related it in Ma‘ṣūrah al-ʻIlām from the hadith of Ibn ʻUmar in a weak transmittal; and Abī Dāwūd related that ʻUmar pointed out a child named Abī ʻIsā; and Maghrīb b. Shurbah disapproved of using the name Abī ʻIsā and stated that the Messenger of God said, “Name after me”—its transmittal is genuine (ʻIrāqī).
131. Abī Dāwūd related it from the hadith of Abī al-Dardā‘. Al-Nawawī said that its transmittal is reliable, and al-Bayhaqī said that its transmittal was incomplete (mursal) (ʻIrāqī).
132. Al-Bayhaqī related it from the hadith of ʻAbdullah b. al-Ḥarīrī b. Jīz al-Zubaydi. The transmittal is genuine (ʻIrāqī). (See also ʻAbd al-Ra‘īq, Li‘ār, 2:60.)
133. From the hadith of Abū Hurayrah, which is agreed upon (ʻIrāqī).
134. Muslim related it from the hadith of Samrah b. Ḵandab. This was also related from the hadith of Jābir (ʻIrāqī).
135. Ibn Hanbal regards this sacrifice on the seventh day as absolutely obligatory: “If a father sacrifice not for his son, and he [the son] die, that son will not intercede for him on the day of judgment” (Lane, Arabian Society, 191). However, the founders of the other three principal rites regard it in different and less important lights. It is obvious here that al-Ghazali is resorting to the practices at the time of the Prophet. These practices not only include the animal sacrifice on the seventh day, but circumcision and shaving the hair of the child and giving its weight in silver or gold to the poor as well. According to Lane, these religious ceremonies can be performed not only on the seventh day, but on multiples of seven—fourteenth, twenty-first, twenty-eighth, or thirty-fifth—after the birth of the child as well (Ibid. See also al-Bukhari, Saḥīḥ, 7:108–10, and al-Tirmidhi, Sunan, 5:237–40).

136. This appears in the Azharitah edition and completes the thought.

137. Hadith of `Aishah, which was brought forth and made genuine (`Irāqī).

138. Al-Tirmidhi related it from the hadith of `A`īd, stating that its transmitted is not uninterrupted, while al-Hakim made it uninterrupted (mutaqadd). Abu Dā`ūd related it from the hadith of Ibn `Abbas, except that he said “a ram” [rather than a sheep] (`Irāqī).

139. Al-Bukhari related it from the hadith of Salman b. `Amir al-Ḍabbī (`Irāqī). (See also al-Bukhari, Saḥīḥ, 7:109.)

140. Al-Hakim [al-Tirmidhi] related and clarified it from the hadith of `A`īd; al-Tirmidhi’s transmission is cut off, up to the word ḥassa, while its transmission is not uninterrupted (`Irāqī). Al-Tirmidhi stated that Ḥāsan’s hair weighed a dirham or so (Sunan, 5:234).

141. Hadith ‘Asma’, which is agreed upon (`Irāqī). (See also `Abd al-Baqi, Luḥ, 1:62.)

142. `Abd al-Baqi notes that the hadith ends here, excluding the rest of the phrase. He also explains “Islam” as meaning “Medina” (Luḥ, 2:82). (See also al-Bukhari, Saḥīḥ, 7:108.)

143. Hadith Ibn `Umar. It was related by the companions of the Sunan. Al-Tirmidhi stated that it was genuine and of fair authority (`Irāqī).

144. This occurs in exceptional cases as explained by `Ali: “If there is any fear that in safeguarding her economic rights, her very freedom of person may suffer, the husband refusing the dissolution of marriage, and perhaps treating her with cruelty, then ... it is permissible to give some material consideration to the husband, but the need and equity of this should be submitted to the judgment of impartial judges, i.e., properly constituted courts. A divorce of this kind is called khul” (Holy Qur’ān 91, n.258; cf. W. R. Smith, Kinship and Marriage, 122).

145. This tradition with the additional words, “and Paradise will be forbidden unto her,” was related by Abu Dā`ūd and al-Tirmidhi, who made it better, and by Ibn Mājah and Ibn Ḥabbān from the hadith of Thawbān (`Irāqī).

146. Al-Nisā`i related it from the hadith of Abu Hurayrah, and al-Ṭabarānī related it from the hadith of `Aqīb b. `Amir in a weak transmission (`Irāqī).

147. There are two concepts here: having coitus with her automatically nullifies the ‘iddah; and the lengthening of the ‘iddah stems from the necessity to make sure that she has not conceived (see “Divorce” in the Introduction).
166. See chapter 1, note 51.
167. Râbi‘ah al-‘Adawiyyah, orphaned at an early age, was sold into slavery as a child. She later settled in Basra where she was well known as a saint and a preacher and where she was highly esteemed by her pious contemporaries. To her is attributed the theme of divine love in Islamic mysticism. She was a celibate; is often confused with Râbi‘ah of Syria who was married. She is entombed near Jerusalem. Her death date is given variously as 135/752 and 185/901 (cf. Farid al-Dîn ʿAṭṭār, Muslim Saints and Mystics, 39–51, and M. Smith, Râbi‘a the Mystic, 5–6, 45, 140–43).
168. Abû Dâ‘ud al-Tawhîdî and al-Bayhaqî related it from the hadith of Ibn ʿUmar; it was also related by Abû Dâ‘ud from the hadith of Sa‘îd; and by Muslim from the hadith of ʿAlishâh; al-Darqûqî made it genuine in his al-Imad. All had slight variations in their transmitters (Irâqî).
169. That is, cater to his senses.
170. The word “presence” is missing in this text but appears in the Azhariyyah edition.
171. So as not to attract attention. She should not satisfy her own vanity, but be humble and meek.
172. Related by Abû Dâ‘ud from the hadith of Abî Mâkî al-Ashjâfî in a weak transmittal (Irâqî).
173. Al-Khurâṣî related it in Makârin al-Akhklâq from the hadith of Abû Hurayrah in a weak transmittal (Irâqî).
174. This is possibly ‘Abd al-Mâlik b. Qurayzah al-ʿAsmî, who was the famous philologist and grammarian at the court of Harûn al-Rashîd. He studied the language of the Arabs of the desert, which is considered to be a “pure” model for linguistics. He died in Basra in 213/828 (Ibn al-Nadîm, Fihrist, 965).
175. Ḥadîth Muʿâdh which was related by al-Tirmidhî who said it was authentic and of fair authority; it was related by Ibn Mâjah (Irâqî).
176. Ḥadîth Umm Ḥâbîbah, agreed upon (Irâqî).
177. ʿAsmâ’ was the daughter of Kutayba, Abû Bakr’s first wife. She was the elder half-sister of ʿAlishah and one of the early converts to Islam in Mecca. She was married to al-Zubayr b. al-ʿAwwâm, and their son, ʿAbdullah, was “repeatedly the first child born in the Muslim community” at Medina. She died in Mecca in 73/693 (Encyclopaedia of Islam, new ed., s.v. “ʿAsmâ’”).
178. Zubayr b. al-ʿAwwâm, cousin and companion of the Prophet, was killed at the Battle of the Camel in 65/656. He was a member of the council to choose the third caliph. He was also referred to as al-Husnî, a term that refers to the earliest missionaries of Islam. There were twelve Hâdîrs, “who are said to have been appointed nûbiyûn of the Medins” by Muhammad (or by those present) as “surety for their people just as the apostles were sureties for Ṣâîb b. Maryam” (Ibn al-Nadîm, Fihrist, 292–93, 1135).
179. A parasang is a Persian measure of length, ancient of about thirty stadia (2.8 to 4.2 miles).
180. Ḥadîth of ʿAsmâ’, agreed upon (Irâqî).
181. The Azhariyyah edition indicates that she came upon the Prophet.

APPENDIX A

2. Rosenthal, Political Thought in Medieval Islam, 38.
4. al-Ghazzâlî, Counsel for Kings. xxxvi.