Dr. Mike Sliter is an industrial-organizational psychologist who is concerned with how people treat one another at work. His research has largely focused on workplace incivility – a low intensity deviant behavior where people are rude and discourteous.

In his talk, Mike will define the term “incivility,” and talk about how it manifests in the context of work. He will go on to discuss theories regarding why incivility occurs, as well as antecedents and outcomes of this incivility. He will finish by discussing how we can reduce incivility at work (as well as in our everyday lives!).

UL 0130 LILLY AUDITORIUM ON THURSDAY, APRIL 3.

4:30-5:30 P.M.

REFRESHMENTS AVAILABLE AT 4PM IN LILLY AUDITORIUM LOBBY

SPONSORED BY THE SCHOOL OF SCIENCE DIVERSITY COUNCIL AND THE COMMON THEME PROJECT